A Large Bill

According to Treasury officials, Uncle Sam's cost for the big war to date, including the soldiers' bonus, amounts to forty-five billion, two hundred million dollars ($45,200,000,000). That is a good deal of money; two and a half billions out of 45 billions for the soldiers is not too much for those that did the fighting.

The veterans' bill is not yet settled, according to the program, the total pension cost, still to come, will be many billions more.

But even 45 billions is a good deal for a war that did not concern us, that we did not start, and should not have joined.

All these figures do not include the gigantic total of billions lost in depression, born of the war. Fortunately, no part of the United States has been lost, leaving out money and frazzled nerves, we have everything we ever had, and lack only the brains to use it.

In North Carolina state prison yesterday Ed. Jenkins, 49-year-old white man, was executed in the new "gas chamber." The second criminal to die by the new method, he lived seven and a half minutes after the gas was turned on. The first man to die, a Negro, lasted eleven minutes.

Much ingenuity has been devoted to new methods of killing men; hanging, the garotte that crushes the backbone, the axe, sword, guillotine, electric chair, boiling oil, burning alive, crushing the chest by elephant's foot in India, sawing the criminal lengthwise in China, by depriving of sleep, enclosing in the hollow "iron virgin" lined with spikes, hanging in an iron cage over the edge of a castle wall to starve.

Louis the Eleventh's interesting cage, invented by a bishop, made it impossible for the victim to stand, sit or lie down. The inventor, appropriately, was its first inmate.

What will come next, a "death ray," killing the man as he sits in his cell, or mass executions like our industrial mass production? Our mass crime wave would seem to indicate some such method.

The simplest plan might be to take fifty or a hundred criminals at a time, ten thousand feet up in an airplane cage, over some desolate mountain or above the ocean, and drop the bottom out of the cage. Everything is possible.

Yesterday witnessed one

BUS WRECKED TO SAVE MAN

Two men were killed, four women were held for treatment in hospitals after injuries in four different motor accidents, and two other women were treated at hospitals and released today.

Miss Helen A. Walsh, 21, of Felsway, Medford, with 46 stitches in her head from an auto accident a few weeks ago, was involved in another mishap today.

The bus in which she was riding skidded when the operator swerved it to avoid striking a man lying in Sylvan street. The bus struck a light pole, and Miss Walsh, already in a weakened condition, collapsed. She was admitted to Maplewood Hospital.

POLICE SEIZE 250 IN RAID ON BETTORS

They arrested 250 persons, nearly half of them women, while nearly as many others escaped through a rear door.

The rooms were at Max avenue and Cambridge street. Police smashed their way through the Max avenue door, who made their escape made their way out through the Cambridge street exit.

Sergeant Edward Maher led the raiders. He declared that the place was going "full blast" when he got inside.

WIRES TO ALL TRACKS

Long queues of bettors were at the three "receiving cashier" windows, and a shorter line waited at the two "paying cashier" windows, police said.

Others were described as sitting about in folding camp chairs, watching the information posted on a 75-foot chart, on which was listed every type of racing data

CURLEY ACTS TO OUST NEW WPA HEAD

Governor Curley in Washington today opened a battle to displace Paul Edwards, a New Yorker, named as acting Massachusetts WPA administrator to succeed Arthur G. Rotch.

Edwards, chief regional examiner for the WPA in New England and New York state, is virtually unknown here, and it was generally expected that the appointment would go to some prominent Democrat.

Expressing surprise at the appointment, Governor Curley said:

"I can't believe they would do anything like that without consulting the senators and the congressional delegation from Massachusetts.

"I am sure Senator Walsh would not stand for anything like that. I shall take up the appointment with the senators and congressmen here today."

His surprise was equaled by that of Democratic leaders here, and in other sections of Massachusetts. Many protested against naming an

House Bloc Demands Currency Inflation

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Feb. 1—House inflationists today decided to fight for issuance of new currency to pay the cost of the soldiers' bonus but ignored a proposed farm bloc combination for issuance of "greenbacks" to meet the farm problem.

At the same time, the group of 50 House members decided not to oppose the move of Senate leaders to attach a bonus appropriation rider of $2,249,000,000 to the independent offices supply bill in the Senate.

After electing Rep. Patman (D) Texas, chairman, the group authorized him to name a steering committee to carry out the program.

A resolution offered by Rep. Greenwood (D., Indiana) demanding currency be issued against gold and silver now in the Treasury to pay the bonus, was adopted.

NO TAX DISCUSSION

Some members took the position that in deciding not to oppose the bonus appropriation rider, they were abandoning all chance to obtain inflation legislation.

"I do not think you can do anything under this situation," said Rep. White (D., Idaho).

Rep. Murdock (D., Utah), said the only way to conduct the fight is to seek amendment of the Liberty Loan Act.

The 50 members attending the meeting did not discuss an alliance with backers of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill or opposition to taxes for the new far program.

"That opens up a field for uncontrolled expansion of the currency because mortgage debts of the country are so great," explained Rep. Greenwood.

"If we go in for the Frazier-

BOY AT PLAY WITH GUARD NEARBY

Spirited from the governor's mansion at dawn in a private automobile, under the watchful eye of a state trooper, Francis Curley, 12-year-old son of the governor, was hidden away in Plymouth today.

A note threatening that he would be "kidnaped within the week" was received by Governor Curley just before he left the state on a vacation trip to Palm Beach, then Havana.

Unable to remain at home to guard his son, the governor placed him under the care of Dr. Martin English, the family physician.

Only half-comprehending the seriousness of the situation, young Francis spent the day tobogganing on the South Plymouth estate of Mrs. Dorothy Whipple Fry, a close friend of the governor.

DOG ON GUARD

But as he played in the snow an armed Boston police officer stood guard nearby, and a huge Great Dane, named "Blitzen," joined the play.

Francis' playmates were Dorothy, Sylvia and Margie Fry, young daughters of his hostess; Olga Olsen, of Lee street, Brookline, Parker Barnes and Richard Withington, both of Plymouth.

The note which brought about the abrupt departure read:

"Your son Francis will be kidnaped within a week."

The governor declared that he had hoped that the news of the kidnap threat would not leak out. He said that the note was typewritten and bore no [illegible] was turned over by [illegible] to Police Commissioner Fu[illegible] M. Sweeney.

Italy Loses 10,000 Men In Battle

London, Feb. 1—"Annihilation" of an Italian army under General Diamanti, operating in northeastern Ethiopia, was claimed by Ethiopian sources in a Reuters News Agency dispatch from Dessye, Ethiopia, today.

The Ethiopian claim is that the famous "28th of October" division of Fascists, numbering 10,000, was included in the casualties, of what was described as the greatest battle of the war on the northern front, ending yesterday.

HUNDREDS CAPTURED

The dispatch adds that hundreds of prisoners were captured, 175 machine guns, 2653 rifles, 18 tanks and large quantities of ammunition.

The Ethiopians own losses in killed and wounded did not exceed 1200, it was declared.

Quins' Nurse Out; Row Reported

North Bay, Ont., Feb. 1 (INS)—Nurse Cecile Lamoreux, head nurse at the Dafoe Hospital of the Dionne quintuplets since last June, left the hospital today, according to reports here.

Although friction with Dr. Dafoe regarding internal management of the hospital was said to have motivated Miss Lamoreux's resignation, neither the nurse nor the doctor would comment.

Dr. Dafoe intimated he would issue no statement unless Nurse Lamoreux first issued one. A new nurse will arrive within the next few days to replace Miss Lamoreux.

Boy Dying In Mystery Bleeding

Victim of a rare disease, from which he is bleeding to death through the pores of his skin, Joseph O'Neill, 8, of Washburn street, Lynn, battled gamely for his life late today at Children's Hospital, Brookline.

Doctors praised his courage as they prepared to try to replace the blood he has been losing for ten days. Sergeant John P. Hines of the Lynn police, a war veteran who saw active service as a machine gunner, stood by as a volunteer.

Meanwhile, specialists came to watch the battle against the life-sapping blood flow in order to observe first-hand the problems presented by such a rare malady.

At first the desperateness of the boy's plight had not been apparent. He came home from school with a violent nosebleed a week ago Tuesday.

Mrs. O'Neill said that she laid him down on the sofa and fought for some time to staunch the flow of blood, finally managing to check it.

Two days later he came home again, and she called Dr. Richard W. Allison. Dr. Allison finally managed to halt the flow again.

Nothing happened for about three days, Mrs. O'Neill said, and then he came home in pitiful condition.

One transfusion failed to help at Union Hospital in Lynn. Then Dr. Allison ordered him to the Brookline institution.

Fearful that a delay might be fatal, authorities rushed him there in a police automobile, driven by Patrolman James Burnett, known as "the fastest, safe driver on the Lynn force."

LANDON PLANS FOR ANOTHER ATTACK ON NEW DEAL

TO ELABORATE ON HIS TOPEKA PROGRAM

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 1 (U8)—Governor Alf M. Landon, pleased by the widespread approval given his address here last Wednesday night, settled back today to the task of governing the State of Kansas.

During the next four weeks he will take the time to prepare his next important address, to be delivered on the Founders' Day celebration at Lincoln, Neb., February 9, when he will elaborate upon the program outlined at Topeka, according to close political associates.

High Republican political leaders, who would like to see Landon the standard bearer in the campaign next fall, expressed a certainty that there would be no major political issue on which the governor's stand would not be known by the date of the Republican convention in Cleveland next June.

PLANS FOR ADDRESS

They were elated by the fact that Landon spoke frankly and fearlessly and in detail of the policies he would inaugurate in the administration of national affairs.

"The governor himself felt that he had not pussyfooted in putting forth a program of his own, saying that he had offered his ideas on economy, against waste and extravagance and for a balanced budget, 'pretty fully.'

In his address at Lincoln, Governor Landon intimated he would follow rather closely the general outline of his first call to the people of the nation for a return of sanity in expenditures and governmental policies made in the Topeka speech, but that some of the points might be amplified where it was thought advisable for a clearer presentation of his attitude on major issues.

MORE ADDRESSES

He will reiterate, however, his associates predict, an insistence upon the preservation of the Constitution as the final safeguard of American liberties, upon an end to governmental waste, bureaucracies, boondoggling, fostering of class hatreds and to "fuzzy thinking." In the foreground will be his demand that the budget be balanced.

His Lincoln speech will be followed by others prior to the Cleveland convention, his friends and advisors here indicated today.

Ogden Mills 'Favorably Impressed' by Landon

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 1 (US)—"Another Coolidge!"

Dr. O. R. Ries, Republican committee chairman of Walworth county, said:

"As county chairman, I can play no favorites at this time, but I can fairly state that a majority of first district Republicans are for Landon. He is for common-sense, Coolidge type that people, generally, want today, after years of Democratic experimenting, have put us in a worse condition than ever before."

Axe Mercy Killing Laid to Coal Miner

Montgomery, W. Va., Feb. 1 (INS)—A strange "mercy killing" was revealed here today with the arrest of Frank Clark, 35-year-old miner, who police said confessed that he bashed in his wife's head with an axe because she was ill and he despaired of her recovery.

Clark was arrested at Kingston. Police Chief Carl Campbell said no formal charge had been filed against him.

Lemke bill, that lets down the floodgates for uncontrolled inflation. We are opposed to wild inflation."

The group unanimously adopted a motion by Representative Connery (D.) of Massachusetts not to interfere with the bonus appropriation on the ground that members would be violating their agreement to do nothing to interfere with cash payment.

CONNERY IS LEADER

The House group cheered a statement by Senator Thomas (D.), Oklahoma, that a movement will be inaugurated in the Senate to oppose further issuance of tax exempt bonds until the government has issued money based upon gold and silver in the Treasury.

Members attending the House inflation group's conference included:

Speaker Bankhead of the House at a press conference said that the chance of inflation to pay the bonus probably will be hurt if the Frazier-Lemke bill is brought to the House floor.

Backers of the bill, he disclosed, now have 215 signatures to a petition to bring the measure, which calls for issuance of $3,000,000,000 in new money to refinance farm indebtedness, into the House. Three more signatures are needed.

TO BLOCK TAXES

Leading support to the House group, Senator Thomas said:

"We are going to start a movement in the Senate to block all tax legislation and issuance of all interest bearing bonds until the Treasury has issued currency against idle gold and silver."

Rep. Patman, after being elected chairman of the House inflation group, stated the issue as follows:

"We are going to be faced with a request for additional taxes. The question is whether we are going to sit back and allow taxes to be imposed or whether Congress is going to exercise its powers to control the currency under the Constitution."

SMITH-ROBINSON? HOW DO YOU VOTE?

READ, THEN CAST YOUR BALLOT

United States Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas answered Governor Smith. He praised the Roosevelt administration and the New Deal.

Said Smith:

"There can be only one capital, Washington or Moscow.

"There can be only one atmosphere of government—the clear, pure, fresh air of free America, or the foul breath of Communistic Russia.

"There can be only one flag, the Stars and Stripes, or the flag of the godless Union of the Soviets.

Replied Robinson:

"Governor Smith, you approved the NRA, you approved farm relief, you urged federal spending and public works, you urged Congress to cut red tape and confer power on the executive, you urged autocratic power for the President, and you exposed with merciless logic the false cry of Communism and Socialism.

"The New Deal was the platform of the 'Happy Warrior.'

"The policies of the Liberty League have become the platform of the unhappy warrior."

Friday the Boston Evening American, in a special supplement, gave its readers the complete texts of both the Smith and Robinson speeches. The indictment was there. The defense was there.

IT WAS SMITH VERSUS ROBINSON.

IT WAS THE JEFFERSONIAN DEMOCRAT VERSUS THE NEW DEALER.

4 MEN SEIZED IN $25,000 RAID

Stills, contraband liquors and other material valued at $25,000 were seized by agents of the federal alcohol tax unit and state troopers in one barn on the outskirts of Chicopee and in another in Florence early today.

In the barns the agents seized a 500-gallon still, seven gallons of finished alcohol, 500 gallons of sugar mash, an auto filled with sugar, 75 bushels of yeast and 70 gallon cans. John Simone of Worcester and Anthony Rose of Springfield were arrested.

In Florence agents seized a 700-gallon still, 120 gallons of alcohol, 1600 pounds of brown sugar and 60 pounds of yeast. Two men, whose names were not disclosed, were arrested.

According to raiding officers, the plants were capable of putting out 300 gallons of finished alcohol daily, which resulted in a loss of $1600 to the government in taxes.

Prolonged Cold Perils Coal Piles

Chicago, Feb 1 (AP)—Coal piles dwindled dangerously low in many states today as a shivering nation heaped extra fuel in furnaces against the lengthening siege of bitter cold.

Mercury columns shrunk far below normal everywhere east of the Rocky Mountains except the Gulf States, keeping miners at work for six days at some points to meet the rising demand for coal.

Iowa, with temperatures at zero and below, put coal distribution in the hands of the Governor. Fuel supplies in Illinois were the lowest in 20 years, but mine unions in Springfield refused to forget their 35-hour week contracts and stay in the mines today.

Boston's Chamber Seeks Air Base

The committee on aviation of Boston Chamber of Commerce announced today letters had been sent to all New England members of Congress calling attention to the fact that appropriations probably will be made soon to permit a start in the construction of a series of air bases for national defense and part-time training.

The letters ask the members for active support to assure early recognition of New England in locating one of the bases in this region.

3 Persons Over 65 Rescued in Fire

Northampton, Feb. 1 (INS)—Standing ankle deep in snow on the porch roof of their burning home, three elderly persons were rescued down ladders by firemen today.

Those rescued were James F. Wells, 71; his wife, Carrie, 69, and her sister-in-law, Miss Nellie Kingsley, 65. Neighbors heard their cries.

Death Takes One Of Oldest Twins

War Vet, Parents Burn to Death

Bancroft, La., Feb. 1 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Johnson and their son, Walter, a World War veteran, burned to death today in a fire which destroyed their home two miles south of here.

Johnson was 73, his wife, 71.

ALVIN G. PETERSON DOROTHY PETERSON

If this ex-soldier dad doesn't get his baby bond bonus application made out correctly, it won't be the fault of his two solicitous helpers, his eight-year-old daughter, Dorothy, and Miss Honore Doyle of the Boston Evening American special Veterans' Service Bureau, 294 Devonshire street. The veteran, himself, is Alvin G. Peterson of Bellingham avenue, Belmont.

BUREAU HELPS 2000 TO FILE FOR BONUS

Expressions of appreciation and gratitude were heaped upon the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser today for their unflinching fight in support of the bonus and for their service to veterans in the establishment of a special bonus office.

The thanks came from veterans themselves — 20,... strong — who have thronged the special office at 294 Devonshire street in the past three days to obtain blanks and aid in filling them out.

Appreciation was also expressed by State Commander John H. Walsh of the Massachusetts Department of the American Legion, who said:

"I heartily congratulate and thank the Hearst papers for their consistent support for the immediate payment of the bonus. They waged an excellent fight in behalf of the veteran.

"I particularly want to express my appreciation for the service rendered to the veterans by the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser by the special application office conducted by them."

WHAT TO BRING

To facilitate the handling of applications, veterans were again reminded today to bring:

THEIR ADJUSTED SERVICE CERTIFICATE, OR THE "PINK SLIP" GIVEN IN RETURN IN CASE OF A LOAN.

DATA FROM THE DISCHARGE PAPER GIVING THE ENLISTMENT AND DISCHARGE DATES AS WELL AS THE SERVICE OR "DOG-TAG" NUMBER.

"I can certainly use this money," came from almost every veteran as he asked for his application.

To many it meant the saving of a home, long needed medical treatment, a chance to pay back bills or perhaps a new start in the business world.

Among the first women to apply was Mrs. Margaret Burke of 41 Water street, Winchester, who served as a Yeomen F at the Newport, R. I., Naval Training Station during the war.

To her the prospect of bonus cash meant new clothes for her three children, Joseph, 14; Elizabeth, 12, and Richard, 9.

BONUS BRINGS HOPE

The experience that Mrs. Mildred Bergman of Linwood street, Hyde Park, gained in the war as a second lieutenant in the Army Nursing Corps is standing her in good stead today.

Her husband, also a veteran, is in the hospital with a fractured skull.

The future seemed cloudy until the promise of bonus money for both in the early summer held out a shining ray of hope.

Thomas C. Tevlin of 332 Alewife Brook Parkway brought his young son, Bill, aged five, with him when he filed out the application.

Tevlin said his first purchase would be a new suit for Bill and a subscription to Cop Trust.

LINKS LEOPOLD IN LOEB DEATH

Joliet, Ill., Feb. 1 (INS)—A hatred conceived in adoration, born when Richard Loeb accused Nathan Leopold, Jr., of the actual murder of little Bobbie Franks, and nurtured by jealousy of Loeb's popularity with his fellow-convicts, was advanced today as a possible solution to the razor-slaying of Dickie Loeb by a fellow convict last Tuesday.

Reiterating his conviction that Loeb was "put on the spot," State's Attorney William R. McCabe, while not specifically accusing Leopold of having a hand in the murder plot, declared today he had information that the sullen Leopold headed a faction which thoroughly hated the handsome and popular Loeb.

After Rescue by Firemen

(Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

100 Flee Greater Boston Fires; Firemen Hurt

More than a hundred people were forced to flee their homes in the early morning hours today as fire and smoke from forced furnaces continued to keep Greater Boston firemen on the jump.

Two firemen were partly overcome by smoke, a waiter trapped, then rescued from a roof, and three other waiters fled through stifling smoke to safety today in a fire which caused $5000 damage to the famed Lincoln Inn Society building in Garden street, Cambridge.

The building, a 2½-story structure, is an eating club for Harvard University Law School students and is next to the Hotel Commander.

At the height of the blaze 75 guests were routed from their sleep, packed up their personal belongings and waited in fear that the fire would spread to the hotel.

Francis Connington, cook, who was asleep on the second floor of the club fled to the roof through a skylight as smoke poured into his quarters.

ROUTED BY SMOKE

He was rescued by firemen over a ladder as he stood shouting on the roof's edge.

John Kane, Albert Falco and Richard Abraham, waiters, battled through suffocating smoke down stairways to the street.

The firemen who were affected by smoke returned to their duties after first aid.

Fire starting in an upstairs apartment at 30 Jamaicaway, Jamaica Plain, today spread thick smoke through the building, forcing most of the residents to the basement.

Damage was estimated at $500.

SAVE PARENTS, 3 ●●

Nine persons were rescued by police and firemen when a fire started in the basement of a dwelling on Falcon street, East Boston, early today. The fire was discovered by Oscar Sides, a milk truck driver.

Patrolman James O'Donnell and Leo F. Magner of the East Boston police division rescued Christopher Johnson, his wife, Clara, their daughter, Florence, 18, and their granddaughter, Viola Johnson, three.

The officers then assisted by firemen rushed to the second floor where they saved Joseph Sullivan, his wife, Stella Sullivan, and their three children, Alfred, 16, Helen, 15, and Joseph Sullivan, seven. The loss was estimated at $500.

Attempting to thaw out his water pipes which had been frozen four day's, Joseph Quinn, 83, Morse street, Watertown, a former plumber, and using a plumber's gasoline blow-torch, set fire to his home about 4 o'clock this morning, and with his wife and seven children was forced out.

TEACHES How to Wed HAPPILY

PASTOR LEADS HOLYOKE WAY

By PEGGY DOYLE

"Men and women are beginning to realize that marriage, the world's finest and most exacting profession, is the only one they enter without the slightest preparation."

For fifteen years, the Rev. Moses R. Lovell, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, who was making these observations, has been poignantly aware of the national need for marital education.

"Since I entered the ministry in 1921," he said last night in the comfortable, firelit living-room of his Oak street home," I have been constantly confronted with the inadequacy of the church and society as regards matrimony.

Many Failures

"In these fifteen years in the ministry, I have married hundreds of young couples. They had been deeply in love. They had known each other six months or more. They saw no reasons why they should not be married.

"In too many instances, one or the other a year or two later would again ring my door-bell. He or she hadn't known what marriage involved. They should have known each other longer before becoming legally tied. Their marriage was a mistake.

"The church and society are to blame for this condition. They should provide proper training for marriage for young people, who in their ignorance expect to make success of the most difficult partnership without even rudimentary preparation."

It was this need which inspired Dr. Lovell, pastor of the second largest Congregational church in New England, to found the first church-sponsored school for marriage in Massachusetts.

The first session was held in Parish House here Thursday evening.

For Wedded Bliss

"It seems to me that those whom the depression has not found wanting have discovered in these doubtless times the truth that make for contented existence, foremost of these being a happy marriage.

"The 'Mas Age' has become passe. We are proceeding at a steadier tempo, and young people, who some years ago would have scoffed at the idea of taking marriage seriously, are now more intent about adequately preparing themselves for its manifold responsibilities than their parents ever dreamed of being."

Asked if he believed that this premarital course might make even a dent in his own community in this in-again-out-again era he said:

"I believe it will make a dent—perhaps not much more than that. I am sure, however, that we are making a beginning at the very point of greatest need—this is in attempting, through enlightenment and understanding, preventive measures.

"This is only a beginning, I know, but if all the churches would begin with their own memberships, totalling more than half the country's population, I am convinced that great progress in their own ranks would be achieved in making the average marriage successful.

"As a consequence, the conciences and practices of those outside the church would be stirred and influenced for good."

DIES OF MENINGITIS

Sergeant's Child Ill Only Week

Sergeant Henry J. Bailey of the Boston police department was near collapse today as he wondered at the cruel fate which took from him his 12-year-old daughter Marguerite.

Sharing his heart-rending sorrow and bearing up as bravely as possible at their Brighton home was Sergeant Bailey's wife, Anna.

Their other daughter, Ellen, 9, does not quite comprehend what has happened.

It was only two weeks ago that Sergeant Bailey booked a man at the Warren avenue station.

The man was charged with intoxication. Instead, he was discovered to be ill, and was rushed to City Hospital.

The man died the next day from spinal meningitis, contracted, authorities said, at Bridgewater State Farm. He had been released from the Farm only the day before his arrest.

Deputy Health Commissioner Frederick J. Bailey, when notified of the man's death, ordered 17 officers who had come in contact with him, including Sergeant Bailey, to report for examination.

The State Farm was quarantined, in all four men died there from the epidemic of meningitis.

Dr. Bailey today notified Police Commissioner McSweeney to have all 17 officers examined again by police surgeons, and took steps to determine if any of the officers are "carriers."

The former king, who lives in Rome, is reported anxious to arrange a reconciliation in order to strengthen his prestige with Spanish monarchists.

NURSE Compensation SOUGHT

BILL TO AID MISS SEVIGNY

Woonsocket, R. I., Feb. 1—Declaring it was a long road to rehabiliation for the "mental tortures" she went through, Atorney Eugene J. Jalbert, counsel for Marie Simone Sevigny, nurse, cleared of the poison death of a woman patient, today anounced he would ask the legislature to compensate her.

Jalbert said he would file a bill to reimburse Miss Sevigny for the time she was held under a charge of murder, but would leave the amount up to the general assembly.

All charges against the 26-year-old companion of Mrs. Normandin during the weeks preceding her death last month were dropped by a Providence County grand jury which charged police with "bungling and entirely unsatisfactory" handling of the case.

The jury found Mrs. Normandin died of poison which she administered herself. They concurred with the expressed hope of Judge Philip Joslin that the young woman would have an opportunity now to enjoy the happiness she has been denied.

"Faith in God"

Her trust in God, she declares, had never deserted her and she believes her faith brought about her release.

"I placed my faith in God and He did not fail me," she said today.

"I'm glad it's all over. I knew from the first that eventually someone would believe my original statement that Mrs. Normandin took the fatal dose herself.

"I'm going back home now to my mother and father and forget all about this sad case. I shall never return to Rhode Island. I don't think I'll ever leave Manchester again.

Home to Rest

"But as I leave I want everyone in Woonsocket to know I have no animosity in my heart towards police officers or anyone else involved in my arrest.

"They did their duty as they saw it. I told them when I was arrested that I had nothing to do with Mrs. Normandin's death.

"But why talk about it any more? I prayed to God and asked Him to watch over me and help me in my trouble. I knew He would answer my prayers.

"I want to get home now and tell my father and mother myself that I have been cleared of this terrible charge. I want to tell them with my own lips that I was innocent.

"I'm going home and I'm going to forget all about this."

She was arrested early last month a few days after Mrs. Normandin died in a Woonsocket hospital. The latter had been recovering from a nervous breakdown.

Groundhog to Look For Shadow Here

Come Candlemas Day tomorrow. The groundhog will poke out his head after a long hibernation to see what he can see.

If he sees his shadow then winter will continue for six weeks longer, according to the old legend. But with the weatherman predicting "partly cloudy" conditions for tomorrow, there's a 50-50 chance that there won't be any shadow.

The temperature of Boston and vicinity, meanwhile, is due to remain at approximately 15 for today and tomorrow. Duluth, Minn., with a temperature of 22 below zero is the coldest spot in the U. S. today, while Manitoba, Canada, reports 44 below.

Lot of Smiths

Washington, Feb. 1 (AP)—Representative Creal (D.) of Kentucky likes his little joke.

There was an argument as to whether $57,000,000 should be voted for the Indian service. Finally the appropriation won, with Representative Creal voting for it.

"I haven't any Indians in my district," he said, "but Pocahontas saved Captain John Smith, and I do have a lot of Smiths."

New Deal on Foods And Fashions

Dinner Pills, No Stomachs, One-Style Hats and Contented Cows on Program

By GENE ROBB

Washington, Feb. 1—Plans for a standardized America where fashions and foibles would be forgotten are being drafted by the "New Deal" consumers' division and publicly advocated in its free government magazine, The Consumer.

Current issues reveal its vast program for imposing "government standards" on women's fashions, sheets, canned foods, size of coal, potatoes, tires, gasoline, home building, dress sizes, liquors and dairy products.

Editor Walter Hale Hamilton, Yale professor, who also serves the President as special adviser on consumer problems and holds down the post of director of the consumers' division, advises:

"If women didn't spend so much time trying on hats, they wouldn't have to pay so much for them. Milliners could have smaller shops and cut down their overhead by employing fewer saleswomen."

Women Flattered

Government regulation of size ranges in women's dresses is suggested. Consumers' division believes there should be more sizes. It reports:

"Stores misname sizes out of flattery or courtesy to their customers. They do not always tell a woman that she wears a stubby-stout size. Nor do they always tell her she wears a half size—being a little larger in the hips. But the customer is in this conspiracy, too, since she would rather not admit half sizes and accepts the salesman's flattery with alacrity."

Disturbed by the shift in fashions which inspires American women to buy a new outfit every season, "the consumer" peers into the future and asserts:

"Wastes" of Time

"It is quite possible and greatly to be desired, though some dissent, that the time will come when energies of women shall be canalized into more purposeful activities than the intricacies of personal adornment.

"On that day we may say with the philosopher Bergson: 'Allow me to furnish the interior of my head as I please and I shall put up with a hat like everybody else's.'

"Who can compute the wastes of time and energy of American women whose shopping for clothes is never done and who must submit to invidious comparisons with other women?"

That setting up potato standards will not be so easy is admitted by Professor Hamilton. But he believes potatoes should be standardized and reports:

"The old potato is neither chemically nor nutritionally similar to the new spring potato. Formation of a commission has been suggested to study potatoes and determine when a new potato becomes what we may call a tabulatable potato and when an old potato ceases to be a potato at all."

For "Food Pills"

But Dr. Hamilton looks forward beyond the potato era to a time when "food pills" will replace the full dinner pail. He says:

"In the far distant future it may be that food pills manufactured by super-chemists will be the manna of the brave new world. Or perhaps it will only be necessary to draw out of one's pocket a hypodermic needle for a momentary injection. In such a world, the intestines—confounded by a purposive and wasteless food—might become a vestigal organ."

Working out problems of the dairy industry, Dr. Hamilton makes a pointed distinction between cow's milk, mother's milk and goat's milk, describes the difficulty of milking goats, traces the love life of cattle and concludes:

LIFE STORY of EDWARD VIII

By Hendrik Willem Van Loon

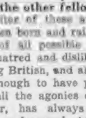

World-Famous Historian and Biographer

(Copyright, 1936, by American Newspaper, Inc., and Universal Service.)

CHAPTER 19

In the make-up of the average run of Englishmen, there is a sort of primitive and spontaneous willingness to give the other fellow a chance.

The writer of these articles having been born and raised in the best of all possible traditions of hatred and dislike for everything British, and also being old enough to have passed through all the agonies of the Boer War, has always most carefully endeavored to discover everything that might strengthen him in his pet prejudices.

Truth to tell, an occasional individual, traveling on a British passport, has most brilliantly succeeded in increasing this writer's native resentment for perfidious Albion and all her perfidious and sneaky ways.

But by and large, now that I am sitting on the uncomfortable seat of the witnesses for the defense, I must confess that Hendrik W. Van Loon every new visit I pay to England or the British Colonies convinces me that those strange and, to me, incomprehensible folk are possessed of certain traits of character which might quite profitably be studied by all other nations.

I am not merely thinking of that sense of relief that comes to you in the midst of vast multitudes of not very pleasant natives when suddenly a single personage, as black as your boot, makes his appearance and by means of a shining brass badge, carrying the name of George Rex (or Edward Rex), reassures you that you are still under the care of the British Raj.

Secret Element

What is the secret element which enters into this particular British attitude towards life, which has given the British Empire its extraordinary power of endurance?

Personally I would feel inclined to look for it in that rather unusual attitude towards life which is clearly reflected by that attitude of "giving the other fellow a chance."

The economic arrangement of England—the existence of a vast mass of hopeless and helpless paupers—seems to belie such an assertion. The inhabitants of the London and Manchester and Birmingham slums do not exactly look like the sort of people who were ever given much of a chance.

They know it. And yet their King or any member of the royal family can safely wander through these ghastly rabbit-warrens filled with a toothless humanity, without running any greater risk than breaking an arm or a leg by slipping on a piece of refuse.

Even the poorest weaver in Lancashire or the most forlorn navvy in Liverpool seems to realize in some vague and inexplicable way that his King is on his side.

They are aware, unemployed as they are, that the country at large has been overtaken by an economic disaster which nobody could foresee when James Watt experimented with his first "fire-engine."

On Same Side

They feel this is merely an intermediate stage, and that in some mysterious fashion they—Jack the weaver and Bill the navvy and Edward the King—are on the same side of the fence and, therefore, are natural allies who should work in unison to give the average "bloke" a better chance.

His Majesty, of course, can ride in a golden coach whenever he feels so inclined and can buy himself a barrel of champagne; whereas the Jack and Bill have so many holes in the soles of their shoes that their feet get wet whenever they shuffle forth to the nearest pub for a pint of half-and-half.

That difference exists and all three of them realize it—but that is just one of those things that nobody can help and therefore no hard feelings!

And so the fact that the King lives in a palace and that Jack and Bill live in an unlighted and unheated tenement, does not interfere with their conviction that each man is entitled to his own sort of life, and ought to give the other fellow a chance to do the same.

The English, forced to live so closely packed together on so small a piece of land, seem to have gone somewhat further than any of the rest of us in finding a workable solution of this difficulty.

Workable Scheme

God forbid, I am not describing a human paradise. There are an endless number of things that might be done much better in England than they are. And nobody knows this as well and from personal experience as the present King himself.

But at the same time (we might as well confess it) the English have worked out a scheme of living among each other which seems to cause less friction, less violence and on the whole a much greater degree of solid sort of cooperation than that found anywhere else in this imperfect world.

The continued success of this system depends upon the honest desire of all the component parts to see it go on as before. And in that respect the English have been eminently fortunate. From the days of that foreign George who made himself so immensely popular by not giving in to the American rebels and who thereby gained the undying approval of the vast majority of his subjects, until today (with the exception of the few short years when the throne was occupied by William IV), the rulers of England have all of them been eminently fit for their jobs.

I do not mean to imply that they were men of outstanding mental abilities. That is where England was lucky again, for men of outstanding mental abilities have always proved to be outstanding nuisances when elevated to positions where they would give full rein to their own special outstandingness.

Average Success

Whereas men and women of merely mediocre mental attainments, but highly representative of the average virtues and vices of their own subjects, as a rule made the most successful rulers. They always remained in close personal touch with the average run of humanity.

And it has just been England's great and good fortune that, especially since the days of Queen Victoria, the nation has been presided over by conscientious and suffering prospective sovereigns who felt and acted and smoked and ate and drank and wagered their pennies on the ponies just like the humblest of their subjects.

It is of course much easier to accomplish this sort of thing in a country where there is no great a degree of racial solidarity as there happens to exist within the realm of the British Isles.

Ireland, in this respect, has always been a foreign substance, and it is therefore just as well that the two countries have decided to part ways at the very moment when they seemed about ready to engage in another one of their interminable and futile conflicts, which during the last 300 years have been such a disgraceful chapter in their respective histories.

In this respect, too, Edward VIII starts with a clean slate. He was too young to have taken an active part in those cruel encounters. History has kindly provided him with a clean sheet of paper and with a pen that had already been thoroughly tried out in preliminary exercises of a political nature.

Business First

The present ruler of England has never posed as a little pinster saint. He has lived his life as best suited his own tastes, but he has always most carefully avoided giving offense by mixing business and pleasure, and invariably he has placed duty ahead of pleasure.

He has worked like a beaver on his Canadian estate, whenever it was a question of England's commercial or political interests.

He has probably listened to more dull speeches and met more bores than any other human being now alive. But he faced the speeches and the bores most cheerfully if by doing so he could promote the interests of his empire. And that, in itself, is quite an accomplishment.

"But," as one so often hears these days, "why shouldn't he have been willing to do so? After all, is it not perfectly marvelous to go chasing from country to country on a great big, shining battleship, to dance with all the pretty girls everywhere, to be the center of attention everywhere; to be forever on top of the world?"

It may be—for a couple of weeks or months. But after several years of this sort of life it becomes a positive form of torture; it becomes a chore that is almost unbearable.

Then why do it? Why stick to it? Why not retire peacefully to your ranch in Canada and leave the job of ruling the empire to Albert, Duke of York, or to Mary, who would probably like it much better. Or why not give the government to the people themselves and say:

"Here, my friends! It really belongs to you. Take it and run it and good luck to you!"

Why not?

I am sorry, but I really can not tell you.

I really do not know.

But sometimes it so happens (and there are quite unfathomable reasons) that a man or a woman fails victim to the persuasive qualities of certain words.

Edward VIII may have suffered this experience. In which case, I think that I can supply the word. It is "duty."

"Knowledge is a steep which few may climb
While duty is a path which all may tread."

The future is on the knees of the Gods. May they be well disposed toward one who so far has trod this path most faithfully".

THE END.

DUKE OF KENT DUKE OF YORK EDWARD VIII DUKE OF GLOUCESTER

Shared by an empire is the heavy grief which saddens these royal mourners, the sons of the late King George V of England, pacing in the slow procession which bears the body of their father from Sandringham Castle, where he died, to the railroad station at Wolferton. Between his brothers, the Duke of York and the Duke of Gloucester, walks the former Prince of Wales, now King Edward VIII. Behind the Duke of York is Prince George, the Duke of Kent.

Mrs. Long as Senator Stirs Louisiana Row

New Orleans, Feb. 1 (AP)—Mrs. Huey P. Long was a pivot of violent controversy within the ranks of the administration machine today because of her appointment by Governor James A. Noe to the United States Senate "to fill the unexpired term" of her late husband.

The row may become so heated that she will turn down the appointment, which she accepted last night. Legal advisers of the organization disagree over the legality of the appointment.

They had virtually decided that the state Democratic central committee was authorized by law to select a nominee for the general election April 21 and a meeting of the committee has been called for next Wednesday.

HELD NOT LEGAL

The legal advisers had held that an appointment was not legal for a term running for more than a year, and Huey Long's unexpired term had fifteen months to run from the date of his death.

Some claim the United States Senate would not have the legal right to seat Mrs. Long if she went to Washington on the appointment, but others said that if the seat is not contested the Senate may let her in.

Just where the situation would stand if the state central committee designated another nominee and that nominee is elected in April is problematical.

Allen Ellender, the nominee for the regular six-year term, beginning next January, had been assured by the leaders of the organization and many members of the central committee that he would get the nomination and could go to Washington in April.

Ellender still believes he will get the nomination of the committee.

NOT AT HOME

Last night Mrs. Long expected to leave for Washington within a few days, but today she was "not at home" to any callers and had nothing to say.

Politicians have put it down as "a monkey wrench thrown in the machinery" by Governor Noe, who is still rankling over the refusal of the organization to let him run for governor in the last campaign.

Others claim it was meant for Mrs. Long to serve only until the April election, but Mrs. Long considered it an appointment for the full unexpired term ending next January.

It may be settled by the central committee nominating Mrs. Long and having her elected in April. In this event she might wait until April to go to Washington or she might go within a few days or she might reject the appointment.

The appointment of Mrs. Long came as the result of the death of Governor O. K. Allen, who had been nominated at the January 21 primary to fill the unexpired term of Senator Long. He died one week after his nomination, creating a confused political situation.

dreadful wholesale killing that occurred accidentally. Scottsboro, Ala., reports twenty Negro convicts burned alive in a "prison truck cage," from which they could not escape when gasoline in a drum transported on the truck exploded. The Negroes had lighted a fire in the front part of the metal truck to keep warm, the gasoline "slopped into the fire."

Whatever else happens, surviving Ethiopians will have the benefit of such good roads as they never saw before, and will learn how to build more of them.

Mussolini, who considers "a second winter of war likely," sends 50,000 civilian workers to build roads and barracks to protect soldiers during the coming heavy rains.

Tropical rains will make operations on foot or with tanks and automobiles practically impossible, but Mussolini will doubtless arrange for continued activity with airplanes above the rain and sufficiently frequent to remind Haile Selassie that there is a war on. Every exploding bomb has its psychological effect.

The government considers "retroactive" income and other taxes to pay the soldiers' bonus, and make up for farmers' losses on the AAA decision.

Retroactive laws are illegal, unconstitutional, usually. You could not for instance inflict the death penalty on a man who stole an automobile last year.

But the government thinks it can constitutionally inflict additional taxation on a man who paid all his taxes last year and the year before. Until the statute of limitations operates taxes can always be increased.

The total of new taxes, retroactive and fresh, needed for this year may amount to $750,000,000.

The nation celebrated President Roosevelt's 54th birthday, organizing throughout the country seven thousand dining and dancing parties, believed to have been attended by 3,000,000 persons. It is announced that the net return will amount to $1,500,000. This money will all be spent to combat infantile paralysis, the curse of modern childhood. Money could not be better spent.

Snetind at Quincy? No! Says Mayor

Sanctuary in the town river in Quincy was offered Mrs. John Sherwin and her son, William, for their schooner Snetind today by Albert S. Pierson, of Riverbank road, Quincy.

But Thomas S. Burgin, Mayor of Quincy, thought entirely different about it, saying:

"If there is any way to prevent the ship from coming to Quincy, I shall take the necessary steps to do so. I think the schooner is a fire hazard and a detriment to this section.

"It's no place for it, because the town river section is too near the public bathing beaches."

outsider to such an important post and were prepared to demand that he be replaced.

Declaring himself certain that the appointment was not permanent, Senator Walsh said:

"I have been definitely assured by Harry L. Hopkins, national administrator, that Edwards' appointment is only temporary. Am confident a Massachusetts man will be appointed within the next few weeks.

"Edwards is familiar with conditions in the Massachusetts office and is being sent there to make certain changes and get it ready for the new dictator. I see no reason for becoming alarmed."

In a statement issued a few days ago Senator Walsh said he had not been consulted by Administrator Hopkins, although he had been in touch with his office. He said then Hopkins felt he had not yet located the right man, free from political influence, who could do complete justice to the job.

Colonel Thomas Sullivan, Boston WPA administrator, insisted on being quoted exactly as he spoke on the situation. He said:

"It is a Hell of a situation when they can't find a man in Massachusetts qualified for the job."

Announcement of Edwards' appointment came from Washington last night after Federal WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins stated that the resignation of Arthur G. Rotch had been accepted.

Rotch's resignation was exclusively forecast in the Boston Evening American some time ago.

Edwards is scheduled to take up his new duties Monday and Administrator Rotch plans to aid him for a few days. After that, he said, he will resume his personal business and social service work.

The new acting administrator has visited Boston previously in his capacity as regional examiner. He is also serving as acting WPA administrator of Maine, a post to which he was appointed last August.

Federal officials gave no indication of how long the appointment would last. It was reported, however, that Edwards might remain until the work relief program ends with the government fiscal year June 30.

Edwards is 32 years of age and married but has no children. He attended Trinity School, New York, and the University of California and is a trained accountant.

He occupied positions in bank reorganization and industry prior to his employment as FERA regional examiner and his later appointments in the WPA.

3 Marines Here Win Promotions

Three members of the Marine Corps stationed in Boston have received promotions, according to an announcement today at headquarters in Washington.

William Michael O'Brien and Jesse Strother Cook, Jr., Boston Navy Yard, Charlestown, and Arthur Fremont Binney, Harvard Union, Cambridge, receive lieutenancies. Bailey Metcalf Colleberg, Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard, has been made a captain.

8000 Shipworkers Strike

Saint Nazaire, France, Feb. 1 (INS)—Eight thousand workmen building the battleship Strasbourg and the cruiser Georges Leygues went on strike today, demanding increased pay.

Boston American Flown to Capital

A Cambridge edition of the Boston Evening American was sent by plane today from Mayor Lynch of Cambridge to Congressman Richard M. Russell, in Washington, as the Railway Express Company took to the air for the first time.

The plane, which left Boston airport at 12:45 p. m., carried a total of 240 pounds of express among which was a copy of the Radcliffe News consigned to Miss L. M. Smith in Honolulu. Express officials say she will be reading the paper by next Wednesday.

The service inaugurated today will be on regular schedule hereafter.

G. O. P. Free-for-All Begins: Warner, Bushnell in Tilt

The G. O. P. in Massachusetts appeared on the verge of breaking into a grand old free-for-all today as various self-announced candidates for governor began taking free-style verbal swings at each other.

And, taking their cue from their leaders, candidates for the delegate to the State convention rose up the tune of "everybody for himself."

The ire was lifted by the announcement of Robert T. Bushnell that he would seek the Republican candidacy for Governor, the fifth man thus far to have made the same announcement.

WARNER'S RETORT

Former Attorney-General Joseph E. Warner greeted the announcement with a broadside. He said:

"His announcement is tragic in its utter lack of a single word of high purpose for the welfare of the people.

"Mr Bushnell says that, despite the various candidates, he must now come in to save the state, and he takes a dig at me by ignoring my candidacy for governor, while hanging others. Fear of my candidacy caused him deliberately to avoid mentioning it. Nor am I surprised."

A map of Massachusetts, with the slogan, "Win this Fall with Saltonstall," appears on political literature being sent out by Speaker Leverett Saltonstall, a third candidate for the Republican nomination for governor.

In a letter to leading Republicans he says he should get the endorsement of the Republican primary convention next June.

He winds up with this fling at Governor Curley:

"I hold that a good governor should be more interested in wise laws than in wise-cracks; more interested in the front rank for his state than in the front page for himself; more interested in hard work than in hard words; more concerned with the public debt than political private debts."

NO EQUAL TAX PARTY

Attorney-General Paul A. Dever today ruled in an opinion given to Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook that the designation, "Equal Tax," used by Frank A. Goodwin on the ballot two years ago when he sought election as governor, is not a political party.

The decision means that while Goodwin polled enough votes in that election—94,141—to have the "equal tax" recognized as a party if it were intended to set up such a party, he used it rather in the sense of an individual tag. Therefore, if others try to put in a slate this year as the "Equal Tax Party," they will have no standing.

PRIMARIES APRIL 28

Party primaries for the election of delegates to the national and state conventions and for naming members of state, ward and town committees will be held April 28, Secretary of State Cook proclaimed today.

Candidates for delegate-at-large to the national convention are required to file 1000 signatures, not more than 350 of which may be from any one county.

Delegate candidates to the state convention and candidates for the state, ward and town committees are required to file five signatures to have their names placed on the ballot.

available from tracks all over the country.

Direct wires were in operation from tracks in California, Florida, Texas and tracks nearer Boston, according to police.

Card games and dice games were said to have been in operation at tables in the room for those who wanted to vary the excitement of playing the horses.

As soon as Sergeant Maher and his three men, Patrolmen James D. O'Connor, James Shea and Timothy Callahan entered the place they blocked the exits and telephoned Chief of Police Timothy F. Leahy for reinforcements.

RUSHES REINFORCEMENTS

As fast as a load of prisoners would arrive at the Cambridge station, they were booked on a charge of "being present where gaming was in operation."

No attempt was made at once to separate the operators and promoters of the so-called race-ehop from the bettors.

Not until all the persons captured were booked was any attempt made to move the equipment.

Police said that the six of the "play," the large numbers of those allegedly betting, was due to the size of the payoff. Police said that the operators were offering 20-8-4 on "win," "place" and "show."

Two hundred to one was offered for parleys, police said.

Raiding officers said there was no yeterin among the women, and little excitement among the men.

FRED ALLEN SPEAKING

Tells of Journey to Top

By ANN MARSTERS

New York, Feb. 1—The show is over. Fifteen hundred people have left the great "air hippodrome" on the eighth floor of Radio City. The amateurs, too, have gone, and the orchestra men have put away their instruments. The movable aluminum chairs gleam in their emptiness.

Only a lean, gaunt, almost sad looking man remains. He remains for the especial purpose of telling the story of his life.

That, under the circumstances, is quite an assignment, for Fred Allen is a little weary. All the humorous gems that he has spent days in writing have just disappeared out into the air and into the ears of about 20 million listeners.

But fortunately Fred Allen is coaxed into not thinking of the future. He is taking us back—back—back—until we arrive at Ground Hog Day in 1894.

On that day, in Somerville, Massachusetts, a baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Sullivan of Union street.

Restless Child

"And here's the connection," says Allen. "That was I. I became—very suddenly it seemed to me—a Somerville boy and I have felt like one ever since. Yes, even though I moved away when I was cutting my first tooth. I can't forget I am a Somerville boy—and a Brighton boy and an Allston boy and a Dorchester boy—for somebody or other is always popping up to remind me of it. And I like it, you know. It sort of keeps me in touch with the folks at home."

The year following the great event of John Sullivan's birth, the elder Sullivans picked up their infant son and moved to Brighton.

"But I was such a restless child," said Allen, "that I just couldn't seem to stay in Brighton. So I said to my mother, smiling to show off my first tooth, 'Mother,' I said, 'how about taking bag and baggage and pushing on to Allston?'"

A few years skip by, and we next see Johnny Sullivan as a lean, lanky little boy living at 35 Pearl street in Allston. He is growing up and going to school and having measles and mumps and whatnot.

"Most of my boyhood was spent on the water front," continued the storyteller. "My history teacher had told me about the Boston Tea Party, and I was always hoping to find one of the little bags . . ."

Fred Experiments

"Yes, in due time I went to school, as a sort of experiment. I wanted to see if a little learning really was a dangerous thing. The fact that I'm still harmless should prove it isn't.

"I went to the Thomas E. Gardney Grammar school in Allston, and I was so bright that I finally got into high school—the High School of Commerce, which is out there in the Fenway, I remember, near Mrs. Jack Gardner's palace."

It was about that time in young Sullivan's life that he began to show slight signs of becoming the Fred Allen of today.

It is more or less common knowledge that after school hours he worked in the Boston Public Library where his father was a book binder. It was there that he came across a book on juggling—and decided to be a juggler. And in January, 1914, he played his first amateur show at the Hub Theater. He got, alas, the hook.

There have been many versions of how John Sullivan got into show business—but this is how it really came about, as Fred Allen tells it.

"One day an actor friend came to me and told me someone had given him a card for a professional tryout," said Fred, "He didn't want to use it, so he gave it to me. It bore the name of Paul Huckle.

"So I went to the National Theater, in the South End, did my stuff, and was paid $5."

The next morning, back in the hardware store, where Fred had taken a job selling nails, his actor friend showed up with the exciting news that Paul Huckle had made a great hit and that half a dozen booking agents were after him. They wanted to know who he was and where he came from. The actor told them that the name was just a gag, that the juggling kid was a swell performer from out West, and that his real name was Fred James.

That's the explanation of the name mix-up—from John Sullivan, to Paul Huckle, to Fred James. Later he adopted Fred Allen—on the advice of a fortune teller, he said.

As Fred James, he signed for a vaudeville tour at $25 a week. (He'd been getting $8 in the hardware store). And it didn't take him long to discover that what his audiences really liked was, not his juggling, but the comical patter he kept up, his own wry philosophy that he offered in his own Yankee twang.

'World on Fire'

That soon came to dominate his work, until eventually he discarded juggling and became the rapid-fire wise-cracker he is today.

(Time out while Allen makes another hitherto unpublished wise-crack.)

"I left for New York the first time on the Fall River Line," he volunteered. "When I docked in lower Manhattan, with a valise that had been nutty during the Civil War, I felt like turning around and taking the next boat back. But I couldn't. I had left to set the world on fire—and I couldn't come home for more matches that quick . . ."

And what of the years between then and now?

"I can only say that my ten years in vaudeville will go down in the annals of the American theater as the era that brought hissing to an all-time high.

"Having made my mark (I never did learn to write), I turned to musical comedy, and in 1922 several persons who dropped in the Winter Garden Theater the New York are reported to have seen me in the cast of a production known as the 'Passing Show.' After this half a dozen process servers tracked me down in the case of the 'First Little Show' and 'Three's a Crowd.'"

Allen did not forget to say that at some time during his "rise to fame" he married Portland Hoffa, a dancer in the "First Little Show," and who is side by side with him now in his radio work.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allen lead a very simple life indeed, in their apartment in the East Fifties.

Portland insists that she does not keep a maid and that she has only one evening gown.

"Portland does the cooking," said Allen, "and I juggle the dishes."

And the rest of the time he spends leading a gag man's life—writing and writing and writing—quip after quip after wise-crack.

It is only fitting that Fred Allen conclude his "life story" with another wise-crack—so Allen scratched his head for a brief moment, and then said:

"I might have gone on with my summer course at Boston University under Prof. William Hoffman but I knew that a college education would probably just be four years of wool-gathering topped by a sheepskin."

SCHOOL FLYING URGED

$30,000 Asked to Teach U.S. Youth

Washington, Feb. 1 (US)—Congress today was asked to set aside $30,000 to carry into the public schools of the country instruction in the fundamentals of aeronautics.

It was urged to use this fund to promote and develop among the youth of the nation interest in aviation after the manner that the Junior Birdmen of America has aroused the interest of 500,000 boys and girls in aero-dynamics, theory of flight, airplane design, engine construction and meteorology.

The proposal came from Rep. Edward A. Kenney, (D) of New Jersey. He offered an amendment to the Interior Department appropriation bill to set aside $30,000 of the $1,480,000 proposed for colleges of agriculture and the mechanical arts, for public school instruction in aeronautics.

In offering his amendment he took occasion to commend the public spirit of William Randolph Hearst in his sponsorship of the Junior Birdmen Organization.

Addressing the House for his proposal Kenney said:

"This Congress has done nothing looking to the dissemination of accurate and comprehensive aviation information for the youth in the schools of the country. Aviation is progress. It is a vital part of our army forces and our naval forces; of our post office facilities and of our commerce.

"While the Congress has stood by, an organization of youth has been developed to promote interest in aviation. I refer to the Junior Birdmen of America, in existence about two years.

"The sponsor is William Randolph Hearst. Through his private support and personal interest great numbers of our youth are receiving the benefit of limited instruction in aerodynamics and the theory of flight, the airplane and its engine and meteorology.

"The membership now approximates 500,000. If the new generation should prove to be airminded, as it ought to be, the greatest credit will go to Mr. Hearst.

"If aviation is to develop in a way worthy of us, we should make accurate and comprehensive information and instruction available to the youth in our schools so that the new generation may grow up to know the plane and its uses without superstitions and prejudices and with enthusiasm for the expansion of an industry that may bring economic prosperity to our country in the same manner that the automobile did a decade ago and as the railroads did back in the last century."

Everett Furnaces Open in April

Jobs—125 of them—are assured for Everett men!

The Mystic Iron Works will relight its blast furnaces in Everett on or about April 1 for the production of 175,000 tons of pig iron annually, according to an announcement made today by the management.

The furnaces have been idle for the past four years.

A total of 125 men will be employed regularly at the plant and 500,000 tons of raw materials will be used, it was stated. This means that directly and indirectly two million hours of labor will be involved annually, including men employed in mining ore, coal and limestone, as well as workers engaged in transportation, the company pointed out.

All of the pig iron to be manufactured at the plant will be for consumption within New England, the company said.

According to H. P. Outwater, sales manager, the plant closed four years ago because of the general depression and the influx of imports, particularly from Holland and India.

Outwater said the reopening is due to generally better business conditions.

THE EXECUTIVE FUNCTION

"Upon another occasion I have given my opinion at some length upon the impropriety of executive interference in the legislation of Congress—that the article in the Constitution making it the duty of the President to communicate information and authorizing him to recommend measures was not intended to make him the source in legislation, and, in particular, that he should never be looked to for schemes of finance."

—PRESIDENT WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, inaugural address, March 4, 1841.

BRUNO 'FRAMED' NEWEST HINT OF HOFFMAN

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 1 (INS)—The New Jersey state police, in considerable bewilderment, today started the strangest man-hunt in their experience.

It is a hunt for alleged accomplices in the murder of Baby Lindbergh—persons whom the police do not believe exist, or ever have existed.

Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, obeying the dictates of his superior, Governor Harold G. Hoffman, reluctantly issued the orders which swung his men back into action on the case which for more than two years was their biggest problem.

The colonel, who as head of the police, was in supreme command of the investigation of the crime from the night of March 1, 1932, is convinced that the conviction of Bruno Richard Hauptmann closed the case.

OBEYS ORDER

Nevertheless, when Gov. Hoffman, who is not satisfied that the case is solved or that Hauptmann is guilty, ordered him to renew his investigation, he obeyed.

In the meantime, confidential sleuths, working directly under the governor and separate from the police, are investigating the possibility Hauptmann was "framed," as suspected by the governor.

Gov. Hoffman calmly admitted at a press conference that this secret "frame-up" probe of his own is being conducted co-incident with the police activity he has ordered.

CHECKS FRAME-UP

An astonished reporter asked:

"Are your own investigators checking into the suspicions of a 'frame-up'?"

The governor nodded.

"Have you ordered Colonel Schwarzkopf and the police to take part in this part of the investigation, too?"

The governor smiled wryly and replied:

300,000 JOIN WINTER SPORTS

With ideal conditions prevailing and winter sports carnivals in 10 Northern New England towns, more than 300,000 fans will leave Boston and vicinity over the week-end, according to railroad estimates.

In New Hampshire carnivals are being held in Lisbon, Jaffstown, New Hampton, Durham, Laconia, Wilton, and Berlin. In Maine at Easton, and in the Berkshires at Ashby and Williamstown.

Eighteen inches of snow is reported as an average for these areas, making for good skiing and excellent snow-shoeing, while all the ponds and lakes are frozen solidly.

Injured Man Held On Holdup Charge

Worcester, Feb. 1—Arrested at City Hospital when he sought treatment for lacerations on the face, Stanley Rinoski, 22, of Langdon street, was in court today on a charge of armed robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $10,000.

Rinoski, who told police he cut his face from a fall on the ice, denied he participated in the holdup of a Water street creamery yesterday afternoon when three shots were fired in a chase.

General Strike Hint in New York

New York, Feb. 1 (AP)—The threat of a general strike in New York as a result of the impending walkout of building workers was hinted today by James J. Bambrick, president of the Building Service Employes Union.

Bambrick said his union has the support of a number of American Federation of Labor unions here and declared his belief the controversy with the building operators may bring on a general strike.

Sea Guard Veteran In 1500 Rescues

After 30 years of faithful service and with a credit of having taken part in more than 1300 sea rescues, Chief Boatswain Arthur J. Young of the United States Coast Guard Service at Nahant Station was retired today.

Young, who is 52 and married, has two children. He will make his home at Orleans after returning from a two months' vacation in St. Petersburg, Fla. He joined the Coast Guard as a surfman at Manomet in 1906.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I have found a friend for "Lonely."

Poor, friendless little "Lonely" will be able to stay in Boston now, go to the theater, attend luncheons or just sit quietly by the fire, exchanging those delicious confidences we women love to share.

Yes, I've found a friend for "Lonely" and I'm tickled to death. I've found a wonderfully sympathetic friend. And "Lonely" will love her just as I love her.

She lives just outside of Boston, in one of those fine, "homey" communities where the evening train means "Papa's coming home" and where one can sink into a soft chair, doze off by the radio and realize what a beautiful place the world can be.

"Lonely" is going to be happy, very happy. I KNOW she will. And all those thoughts she had about leaving the boys she loves and going back home to Mother are as dead as though they never existed.

Now really, truly glad I am! It's all so wonderful!

The best letter of the week? I told you I'd tell you the winner today. I shall—it's the woman who wants to be a friend to "Lonely." I hope they'll spend the five dollars the first time they'll meet. I'd even like to help them.

And the five-dollar daily prize—it goes to "Patience," the brave little girl who told us yesterday she refused to believe her lover guilty, even when the state sent him to prison for five years. She's proving her loyalty by remaining faithful to the "only man in the world." When he's free they'll be married.

Of course I know what "Patience" will do with the money I'm sending her. It will go, every cent of it, for a nice, big present for the boy who's counting the days that seem so terribly long.

Now kind readers, here is my mail bag for today:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My heart goes out to "Lonely." Like thousands of others, I am lonely too. Wouldn't it be nice if Mr. and Mrs. "Lonely" and my husband and me could exchange visits, have card games, listen to the radio and get acquainted.

Then, perhaps, Mrs. "Lonely" would like to join a gym with me. (It meets twice a week and costs only a dollar a year.) I think I'd have the courage to go if I had someone to go with.

I am 38 years of age, am married, have a son in high school and enjoy a comfortable home. We came from New York.

If "Lonely" would drop me a line, we could meet in town for lunch, go to the movies and kind of "start the ball rolling."

My best wishes to you, and I hope I haven't asked too much. It has taken quite a bit of courage. MRS. W.

MY DEAR FRIEND:

What a beautiful letter you write! I am printing every line of it, because I want every woman to read it. What a wonderful place the world would be if everybody were like you.

"Lonely" will read your letter, I'm sure. And I do hope she accepts your kind invitation. As soon as she give me permission, I shall send her address to you.

You are both my friends and I want you to be friends of each other. You'll have lovely times together, I'm sure. Perhaps, you'll let me go along sometime?

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I simply had to write when I read R. B.'s letter about taking in a hired girl. I did this very thing when my children were small and it almost ended in disaster.

Within six months I could see that my husband was becoming unnecessarily attentive to the girl. Things finally reached the point that she was telling lies about me to him.

Common sense made me do the very thing you advise R. B. to do. I discharged the girl and forced her to leave even though at first she refused to do so.

Today my husband and I are very happy. Our children are doing well in school and promise to grow up to be splendid men and women.

R. B. should be very careful how she handles this affair, as lack of tact can easily break up her home. ONE WHO KNOWS.

DEAR HAPPY WIFE:

R. B. will be tactful. There is so much at stake she cannot afford to be anything else.

Your letter will give her the courage she needs so much.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX:

Should a girl of 18 marry a man of 38? What would be their chances for happiness?

Two years ago I was forced to leave school when my father lost his job. Though I obtained work, I have not earned a great deal, and have not been able to afford the good clothes every young woman wants.

Recently I met this man who is more than twice as old as I. He has asked me to marry him. If I do, I shall have everything I have always prayed for.

What would you do?

C. G.

MY DEAR CHILD:

I'd stay single. That's what I'd do. I'd never think of marrying a man I did not love. No sensible woman would.

Why, child, as soon as you got the fur coats, party dresses and automobiles this man would buy you, you'd feel more than ever the absence of real love.

And perhaps a man, more your age, would come along and you'd want to marry him. It's more than a "perhaps," for that is usually the thing that ruins marriages like the one you contemplate.

No, my dear girl, don't marry for money. You can't buy love. It comes of its own accord.

Fashion Congress Print Choice

TIME has come for you to admire a turncoat, when it's the lilting, swingy affair that makes such a debonair costume of a black sheer moss crepe and black-and-white print. It received verbal laurels from the Fashion Congress. Miss Katharine Baker, Belmont postdeb, models the costume suit that stresses the importance of black and white, and the even greater importance of utter simplicity for spring. High-necked and svelte, the frock is wrapped slimly inside a cummerbund, matching one side of the jacket. The jacket is a baby swagger, shorter in front, with smooth shoulder lines that descend into amazing fullness at the hem. A side-dipped faille beret and folded-circle bag are chic touches. For shopping information on the Fashion Congress-approved costume suit or accessories, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

AVIS SEES RIFT IN MARY'S ROMANCE

CHAPTER 563

WHETHER consciously or not, my mother-in-law was doing yeoman duty in keeping the Veritzen party at her side until Lillian, Dicky and I should appear as background and support for Noel and Mary in the coming interview.

I realized that as I entered the room and saw Philip Veritzen in an attitude of deferential attention to what was evidently a formal welcoming speech from my mother-in-law's lips.

My father was talking to Mrs. Arlen, and Harry Underwood was keeping Avis so occupied with his banter that she had no chance for even a side glance in any other direction.

It was like a scene from a play I thought, as I saw the young people gathered in the background, with Mrs. Barnes next to Marion, and Hugh Grantland in chivalrous attendance upon the brilliant and kindly head mistress of Whitney Hall.

Noel and Mary were in front of the group, their eyes fixed upon Philip Veritzen, ready to rush forward to greet him at the first opportunity given them. But when Mother Graham takes it upon herself to play the role of chatelaine of the farm house, she makes an elaborate ceremonial of her welcome, and I never have known anyone rash enough to edge away before she finished, no matter what duty—or attraction—lay outside the radii of her voice and eyes.

ADVANCED SLOWLY

Lillian, Dicky and I, therefore, advanced gingerly toward the group.

She saw us at once, and I caught the quick glance she sent us. But it was almost a half minute before she said graciously:

"But I mustn't be selfish, Mr. Veritzen. Your son and his bride, my granddaughter, are waiting so patiently to greet you."

She raised her voice ever so slightly, and turned her head to the group at the back.

"Come, Mary, Noel," she said. "I really ought to beg your forgiveness. I have kept your father unconscionably long."

Her smile of dismissal to the great producer was like a royal gesture, and she was not less regal when she spoke to Mrs. Arlen.

"Here come Mrs. Underwood and the real host and hostess of the farm house to greet you," she said. "I must not monopolize all of your time."

But I noticed that in the interchange of greetings that followed, her eyes were constantly fixed upon one person, Avis Arlen. In my mind I found a strengthening of my conviction that she had deliberately engineered her delay of the formal welcome until the rest of us should be able to reinforce her in her desire to protect her idolized granddaughter from any unpleasantness which meeting Avis might entail.

I had a moment of trepidation when it came my turn to greet Avis Arlen. I was aware that the girl must regard me with active hatred because I had been the one to block her every attempt to make trouble for Mary and Noel upon their wedding day.

A LOVERS' QUARREL

But I was to realize once more that Avis Arlen possesses enough effrontery and "rhinoceros hide," as Dicky dubs her most conspicuous characteristic, to endow a hundred more sensitive girls. She turned to me with a radiant smile.

"Oh, Mrs. Graham," she cooed, "it's so delightful to be down here again at the dear old farm house."

"It's very nice to have you here," I said, salving my conscience with the reflection that as a hostess I could do no less than utter the stereotyped phrase.

"Weren't you terribly thrilled at the return of the honeymooners?" she asked artlessly. "Of course, you didn't take any more stock in that excuse about coming up for the box opening than I do. It's too thin a pretense. Something must have happened to the honeymoon. It do hope they haven't quarreled or anything like that. But I was afraid poor No-el wouldn't be able to go through with it."

The Reducer's Bag of Tricks

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate)

THE trick in the reducing trade is in turning the little things to slim advantage.

You wouldn't think a little thing like salt would keep you from losing, but it is one of the trickiest factors in the reducing program.

Salt holds water in the tissues and prevents a registered loss in weight. Salting down the calories is one of the common dietary mistakes. Break the habit of re-salting food and you are another step toward slimness.

Taking liquids with meals is another apparently harmless habit that works to your disadvantage. An excess of liquid with meals stretches the tummy you want to shrink and abets the appetite. Your appetite needs no coaxing. This applies to water drinking only during the meal, for even a strict reducing diet does not limit drinking between meals.

Liberal quantities of water are particularly important during reducing, when large amounts of fatty tissues are to be broken down, for water is needed to regulate body processes. Drink from eight to ten glasses between meals.

Slow eating satisfies more quickly, whereas rapid eating leads to overeating . . . You ought to know!

Broiling is an excellent cookery rule for reducers. Calories jump from the frying pan into fat—so never fry any food that can be broiled. Broiled meats just fill the bill for reducers, for they are delicious and easily prepared with a minimum of calories.

The last, worst and most prevalent stumbling block in the way of the conscientious reducer is the tendency to crowd all the calories into the evening meal. It's an old reducing custom and a sure way to gain. Distribute the calories throughout the day to meet your energy requirements. Reducers, even though you ignore all the other rules—live up to this one!

Turn a trick with the little things to give yourself the edge on reducing.

Hasty Meals From the Pantry Shelf

Canned Goods Offer Delectable Variety

By MARTHA LEE

THAT canned goods are used by the American housewife is proven by the fact that 6 billion cans of foods were consumed in 1935.

Never have the nation's housewives used so much!

We all know the advantage of a well-stocked pantry, and here are a few good recipes to place on file to change those cans of food into delectable dishes for the table.

CORN FRITTERS

2 cups canned corn
½ cup thin cream or evaporated milk
2 tbsps. sugar
½ tsp. salt
2 eggs
¼ green pepper, chopped
1½ cups flour
1½ tsps. baking powder.

Add milk to corn, sugar and salt and stir in the well-beaten eggs with the chopped green pepper. Add flour sifted with baking powder beat well and drop from a tablespoon into a hot skillet, which has about two tablespoons of shortening melted in it. Cook slowly until the fritters are puffed and nicely browned. Serve hot with tomato sauce.

CORN PUDDING

2 cups canned corn
2 eggs
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
2 tbsps. melted shortening
2 tbsps. sugar
½ cup scalded milk

Chop the corn, beat eggs slightly and mix all ingredients together. Pour into a greased pudding dish and bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F. until firm. Serves six. Two teaspoons grated onion and ½ cup walnut meats may be added to this recipe.

JONATHAN

2 cups hominy
1 tbsp. butter
2 tbsp. catsup
Pepper
1 egg, beaten
1 cup grated cheese
½ cup buttered bread crumbs

Add butter to hominy, stir in beaten egg and season with pepper. Transfer to a mold, chill and cut in thin slices. Arrange in layers in a buttered baking dish, sprinkle each piece with grated cheese and a little catsup. Spread crumbs on top and bake in a hot oven, 425 deg. F, 15 to 20 minutes. Serves six.

Dorothy Harding's Engagement To Sam Callaway Announced

By BETTY ALDEN

DURING THE INTERMISSION at Symphony yesterday afternoon, it was whispered about among several groups of young people who gathered in the corridor, that Dorothy Harding's engagement would be officially announced today . . . So, if you haven't already suspected it, the lucky man is Samuel Rodgers Callaway, who is a senior at Harvard and hails from New York . . .

DOROTHY HARDING

Dottie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Harding of Chestnut Hill, are making known the engagement . . . She was presented in 1933-34 and is a member of the Junior League and Wincent Club . . . She and Sam have known each other for quite a number of years, as the Trowbridge Callaways and the Hardings have been summer neighbors down on Cape Cod . . .

• • •

At a small wedding this afternoon in Cambridge, Miss Barbara Bailey, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Channing Bailey, will become the bride of Wentworth Brown of La Tuque, Province of Quebec, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orton Bishop Brown of Berlin, N. H. . . .

The bride is a graduate of the Beaver Country Day School and of Vassar College in 1932 and is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club . . . Mr. Brown attended Phillips Andover and Williams College and is a member of Kappa Alpha, Phi Beta Kappa and Gargoyle societies . . . He is associated in business with the Brown Company of Canada . . .

Mothers of girls of sub-deb age would never think of allowing their daughters to go out on "blind dates," but when it comes to a semi-blind affair, if we may coin the word, they heartily approve of the method of choosing partners for the girls' . . .

About fifty girls who are coming out next season, or the year after are on the invitation list for the series of sub-deb dinner dances and even though a carefully selected group of prep school boys and Harvard freshmen are asked to attend each one all the fun and unexpectedness of a blind date are preserved until the minute when everyone sits down for dinner . . . the girls find their tables by place cards but their partners are chosen by "lucky numbers."

The second in this series of dances is being held this evening at the Brookline Country Club and three upperclassmen at Harvard have been invited to be head ushers . . . Louis Farley, Anderson Page and James Field . . . The young men assisting them, all of whom are from the top classes in prep school or Harvard freshmen, include Lee Barrett, Daniel Herrick, A. Barr Comstock, Jr., Lane Blackwell and Anderson Storey . . .

Among the young ladies who fall in the category of sub-debutantes and who will enjoy the dinner and dancing are Olivia Thorndike, Eleanor Roosevelt (daughter of Mrs. John Cutter of Dedham, one of the patronesses), Miss Nancy Ware, Miss Katherine Jackson, Miss Cornelia Baker, Miss Catherine Little, Miss Josephine Perry, Miss Isabel Farley, Miss Dorothy Comstock, Miss Susan J. Storey, and Miss Joan Shaw . . .

The patronesses in charge of the dances, all of whom are mothers of sub debs, are Mrs. Charles M. Storey, Mrs. S. Parkman Shaw, Mrs. John Cutter, Mrs. John Wells Farley, Mrs. Reginald Fitz, Mrs. Arthur Perry, and Mrs. A. Barr Comstock.

• • •

There will be more than casual interest expressed by those who visit the Junior League Art Gallery next week to view the ruddy, robust portraits of Pueblo Indians done by Rebecca Lindon Taylor . . . Mrs. Taylor is a former Bostonian, and daughter of the world famous painter of archaeological subjects, Joseph Lindon Smith . . .

The artist's girlhood and young womanhood were spent here in Boston where the Smiths had a mansion on Beacon Hill . . . and in the natural course of events she attended the Winsor School, made her debut and joined the Junior League . . .

In the summer time she and her father used to make journeys to far away places of picturesque interest where they set up their easels and painted leisurely the scenes which appealed to them . . . One of their trips took them to New Mexico where they became interested in the Pueblo Indians as subjects for portraits and murals. On other journeys she and Mr. Smith painted archaeological subjects in Indo-China and Egypt.

One of her paintings hangs in the Musee Guimet in Paris, several are owned by prominent museums or collectors in New York and, at her last exhibit in New York, Sir Joseph Duveen purchased her pencil drawings of Paul Manship's daughter "Chou Chou" . . . She has exhibited in Paris, and in London also, where she was presented at the Court of St. James . . .

She does her Indian portraits on a specially prepared paper which she dyes herself in the bathtub in order to produce just the right shade and texture . . . She is a jack of all trades it seems, for she loves riding (she used to chase mountain lions when she was in New Mexico with the Indians) . . . is an expert skier . . . spends hours gardening in the right seasons and flies a great deal . . .

With the shifting to New York of the Smith's permanent residence, Boston society missed one of the loveliest of weddings . . . for at Rebecca's marriage to William A. Taylor, Jr., nothing was spared to make it a picturesque wedding and not only were there Vanderbilts and Cabots in the wedding party but also Cornelia Otis Skinner, who was a bridesmaid . . . Though many Bostonians have lost touch with the Smiths, those who summer in Dublin still keep their friendship with this very interesting and talented family . . .

Diagnosing Doubt

A young college man put to me recently this reasonable query: "If there exists this great reality which the world calls religion, why should we not feel it more?"

If realizing religion is an event that has thus far eluded a young person, I tend to think that the clue may be discovered in one of these three considerations.

1—In later adolescence it is perfectly normal to encounter a period of doubt. The critical faculty develops under the stimulus of education, and we begin to suspect and reject the naive notions of religion sown in us during childhood. For a period of months or years the imagination is thicksighted, and the Creator has so ordained it.

It is not impious to doubt, nor wrong to question what we have been told. I remember a college student, the son of a splendid missionary in Calcutta, who remained persistently agnostic throughout his college career. Yet I never feared for his future.

Such honest-minded integrity was sure to establish connections with the God of things as they are. This lad would surely keep up the struggle until he arrived, and when he had won a religion by his own right, it would be worth having. So it is turning out.

When young people, so soon as they begin to doubt, give up the quest, and settle down to godless living, then I am concerned that they may miss the whole meaning of living.

2—Religious experience is a moral touchstone. God has arranged it so that we cannot find more light until we are utterly sincere in living up to the light we have. I am constantly re-impressed by the terms upon which the Creator issues the privilege of real communion with Himself. So soon as we accommodate ourselves to others' standards that are not our own, and allow ourselves to do what we inwardly disapprove, we violate the sensitive adjustment of conscience and pay the price of lost clarity of being, and are deprived of that right relationship with life which is the boon of religion. The sincere resolution to set our moral house in order is automatically an invitation to God to enter as an unseen guest and dwell there.

3—If on our daily path we do not meet God it may be that we are not going His way. Perhaps we are clever enough to learn to take the line of least resistance and comfortably to drift. In this direction we shall never find God. An airplane to take off, must face the wind. So we must be attempting something hard, morally exacting, if we would meet God.

Somehow the field of experience in human life most fertile for growing awareness of God is compassion. When we are sorrowing for those in trouble, actively sympathizing with those in want, sharing the human heartaches of the poor, when we are escaping self by projecting ourselves by love into others' experience, God is apt to surprise us by coming very near and making Himself known.

There seems to be a strange restraint in God's nature. He withholds His presence until we prove we really want to find Him,—by persistence in seeking through doubt the truth, by taking seriously moral exactions, by sharing in others' troubles. Then, like Jacob who wrestled until daybreak with the Lord, and would not let Him go until God blessed Him, we find that we have touched the life of the High and Holy One.

Bridge Suicide

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Ironically, the most dreaded weapon of a declarer—the squeeze play—is often cocked and primed by the defenders themselves.

Thus we come to the sad conclusion that, in the bridge mortality table, there are nearly as many suicides as murders. Consider today's hand.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	1 NT	2 ◇
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

The less said of South's jump to a slam, the better. Although his partner did, it is true, bid no trump directly over West's spade bid, the mere fact that the Aces of spades and diamonds might be adversely held should have been enough to induce caution.

But South was the sensational and unsound type of bidder—he leaped first and looked later. I regret to repeat that his foolhardiness won out in the end.

West opened the Queen of diamonds and East won with the Ace. Then, without a second's thought of possible consequences, East banged down the Ace of clubs!

Instead of being, according to his hope, the setting trick, this play added to the record of bridge suicides.

Poor West was inexorably squeezed; discarding before the dummy, he found himself in the embarrassing position of having to hold the high club and three high spades, with only three cards left to him.

Proper Diet In Care of Rickets

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

I HAVE received several letters from worried mothers requesting a diet for the prevention and cure of rickets. First, I want to tell you a little about the disease itself.

Rickets is a disease more prevalent in children from six months to two years of age. But older children and adults often suffer from this ailment.

Because rickets affects the bony structure of the body, sufferers from this disease often have knock-knees, bow-legs pigeon chest, spinal curvatures, and teeth that decay quickly. If the disease is not checked the resistance of the child is weakened and he becomes the ready victim of other diseases.

LACK OF MINERALS

The ailment afflicts children of the rich and poor alike. It is caused by a diet which lacks minerals, such as lime and phosphorus. Other contributing factors are the absence of sufficient quantities of vitamin D and sunlight.

In order to cure and prevent rickets, it is of first importance to have a diet rich in lime and phosphorus. Food abundant in their content of lime are oranges, prunes, figs, apples, carrots, cabbage, spinach, celery, asparagus, lettuce and milk. Rich sources of phosphorus are milk, lean meat, beans, peanuts, almonds, walnuts, whole wheat, cheese and egg-yolk.

VITAMIN D

In addition to lime and phosphorus, the diet must contain adequate amounts of vitamin D. Experiments have proven that a diet rich in these minerals but lacking in vitamin D will not cure or prevent rickets. Vitamin D is found in comparatively few foods. It is included in appreciable amount in liver, egg-yolk, cod liver oil and other fish oils. In lesser amounts it is contained in milk, orange juice, tomato juice, butter, cream and green leafy vegetables.

Since vitamin D is found in limited amount in everyday foods, it is essential to provide more liberal amounts of it. One of our best sources of this vitamin is cod liver oil. This substance contains one hundred times as much vitamin D as is found in butter. Cod liver oil should be given to the infant and young child daily.

Cucumber Lotion

Rich, Soothing Emollient Keeps Hands and Legs Smooth and Chap-Free

By Arline Gould

LET winter winds howl! Let the snow fly! Sheer hose and smooth legs are not incompatible if you use a rich soothing lotion to relieve them of chapness, roughness or "bite."

Use it on your hands as a fragrant finishing and protective cream. It counteracts the hardening qualities of soap and water and preserves the precious moisture in the skin.

This lotion boasts the unrivaled combination of almond, honey and cucumber oils, contains no alcohol and from the moment it is applied feels most "kindly" on the skin.

In appearance is is a milky-white emollient, non-greasy and pleasantly fragrant. Because of the combination of rare oils, its action is unsurpassed for rapid results.

Rough, chapped legs and arms drink it in greedily. A man's face welcomes it after shaving, as it leaves it cool and refreshed, with no feeling of razor-distress. Women with supersensitive complexions, even use it as a powder-base lotion.

Before you bathe is a good time to rub it in. It does "electric" things for slight skin irritations, dryness, chafed and cracked skin. It is inexpensive in price and is not only an ideal hand lotion but a fine body rub as well.

Keep a bottle constantly on your bathroom shelf and let it remind you that your legs—and your hands—need only a little thought at the zero hour to keep them soft, smooth and comfortable.

If you would like to learn the name of this almond-honey-cucumber oil lotion, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beauty Answers

Question—Please tell me if you have ever heard of an electric face mask? A friend of mine who recently returned from abroad tells me that women over there are using them to great advantage. I am most anxious to learn more about them and also would like to know if there is any Boston salon where they can be obtained. Any information would be very much appreciated.

MRS. J. K. D., Brookline.

Answer—I believe that the method you are referring to is known as the Vienna Youth Masque. It is a comparatively new invention, working on a diathermic current. A plaster cast, an exact replica of the patron's face, is made first of all. The customer has her complexion annointed with oils, the mask is placed and adjusted, the current turned on. The oils are literally "toasted" into the skin, and the results are glorious. Pore deposits are softened, circulation stimulated, and lost youth temporarily recaptured. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the name of a Boston salon where these masks can be obtained.

Notes of Society

There is a good deal of friendly rivalry going on among the towns surrounding Boston, which are taking part in the Community Fund Campaign. Outstanding among the women leaders is Mrs. Eldon MacLeod, town chairman of Westwood, who had the highest percentage honors throughout the first week. Other members of the winning Westwood team are Mrs. Josiah H. Child, Mrs. Waldo C. Hodgton, Mrs. John P. Keating, Mrs. George C. Lee, Jr., Mrs. Nelson B. Lee, Mrs. David J. Maier, Mrs. J. Gordon Mitchell, Mrs. Walter M. Probert, Mrs. Arthur W. Wheelwright, Mrs. Charles F. Gehling, Mrs. Joseph Vaux, Mrs. J. Philip Mason, and Mrs. Douglas Campbell.

CHAPTER XXIX

Buzz still intoned into the mike, asking Davis, in seven, to respond.

Jake glanced at his watch and touched Buzz on the shoulder. "That's enough, Buzz. He was down to fifteen hundred, his last report. He could have dropped ten thousand feet since then."

"Yes, sir."

"Tommy, take a taxi home. I want to give Lawson Dizzy's dope on his de-icers while it is fresh in mind. Report as usual, tomorrow."

"Yes, Mr. Lee.

Jake looked at the others.

"All right, Doc, and Baldy," he said. "Order the crash truck out at daylight, come here for any reports before it starts."

They saluted and hurried out.

"Get your blueprints together, Lawson," Jake said, "and I'll give you Dizzy's first-hand dope in a few minutes."

She clung to him for a moment when he kissed her.

"I guess both of us got Dizzy wrong," Tay said.

"Whatever was wrong, he right-ed tonight—I don't know all but I know he must have had more reasons than we can guess," Tommy said.

Jake sat in silence, staring at the broken cigars on his desk. His unobservant, now Dizzy had broken them purposely, to remind him that he was to make no such sacrifice as approving inferior ships, just to save his ticket.

"What about them?"

"That's Dizzy's pilot's license. He was grounded today."

"Grounded? How—Why?"

"Grounded? Good God, Jake —this man had no legal right to fly at all!"

"So that occurred to you, did it? Look here, Al, here's something about Dizzy you didn't know. By approving Adams' bombers I could have had his license renewed in ten minutes, because of the Adams pull in Washington. You know their pull?"

"Yes, to our regret."

"Dizzy wouldn't let me do it. He was a bigger man than I, Al. That's why he knocked Lawson out. That's why he took this run—to prevent me from approving lousy ships, to make the test for Lawson's de-icers. And he left his 'chute because he intended to do just what he has done—make his last landing."

Stone got up slowly.

Died a Hero

"Is that right, Jake?"

"Yes."

"Your pal might have been a play-boy, Jake, but he was a man—a big man. How was I to know?"

"Forget it. Do you want me to stay on here, now?"

"Of course, Jake."

"Then get this, Al—pilots died to develop this air line. They want it run right or not at all. What Dizzy did tonight has done more to help this air line than we can appreciate now."

"Yes, Jake. Well?"

"If I stay on here I never want another word out of you about the way I run this job."

"I get you. That's reasonable.

"Or about the way my pilots fly. Will you dig your spurs into your own desk, and let me run my job?"

Vice-President Al Stone stuck out his hand.

When Tay Lawson came in, with his blueprints, Jake got down to work with him.

Jake remembered every word that Dizzy had said.

Dizzy's Legacy

As he went over it and Tay made notes Tay Finally exclaimed, "That's better than I could have done, Mr. Lee. Don't you see—I would have had to bailed out. Dizzy stuck and reported how they worked, their good points and their weaknesses, right up to just before he must have crashed."

"Yes. What do you think about improvements, based on what Dizzy reported?"

"They can be made. I can see now—his suggestion to set the tubes back eight inches is something I should have known enough to do."

They worked a while longer.

"That's all, Lawson—all that Dizzy could learn."

"It is plenty, Mr. Lee—he—he squared things with me. He shook hands and said that Tommy was too good for him—he wished us luck."

"Dizzy didn't have a mean streak in him, Lawson. Good night."

Mary came in just as Tay was leaving.

"What's up, dear?" Jake asked.

"Lou is at our house, sleeping, from an opiate, and a night nurse with her. Tommy telephoned about Dizzy—Oh Jake, I know how terribly you feel!"

He went over the whole story, so far as he knew it.

"Yes Jake—and there is something else—I thought I was in love with Dizzy—before I met you. I——"

"You don't have to tell me anything about Dizzy, Mary. Do you know what I would do, this minute, if we weren't married?"

"No—what?"

After a while Mary said, "There's another thing — Tommy told me."

"About Dizzy? He's gone now —why not—"

"No, Jake! Tommy said only good things to say about Dizzy. That isn't it. She and Tay aren't going to wait — they're planning to be married before Christmas."

Jake put an arm about her as they went out to the car.

"That," he said, "completes it." "Completes what?"

TOKIO REPORTS PACIFIC PACT WITH U. S.

Tokio, Feb. 1 (INS)—Japanese newspapers, with unanimity that discloses official inspiration, today spread prominently reports of an American-Japanese understanding that may, they said, split the Pacific into two "spheres of activity."

Although the United States embassy bars denied the stories, the newspapers said Secretary Hull had "accepted" two principles laid down by Foreign Minister Koki Hirota. They are:

1—Problems between the United States and Japan are to be solved by diplomatic negotiations.

2—Each country will prevent speeches and actions likely to provoke the other.

ARMS EQUALITY BROACHED

Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, the Vernacular papers said, carried Hirota's principles to the American state department in a trip to Washington last summer.

Recalling how the United States Navy, in far-flung maneuvers last summer, stayed "on its own side of the fence," the articles asserted that America and Japan may agree to divide the Pacific by a more formal arrangement.

With Japan's withdrawal from the London Naval Conference, it was suggested, a two-nation agreement might be reached on naval, air and land armaments—but whether Japan would continue to demand naval equality with America was not stated.

ORDERS TO SAITO

The Japanese foreign minister, according to one paper, Jiji, has instructed Ambassador Hirosi Saito to open negotiations in Washington for a complete agreement embodying Hirota's ideas.

In the midst of all this peaceful verbiage, however, the newspaper Nichi Nichi reported that the navy is organizing a third air squadron base on the island of Formosa for patrolling the South Seas area.

A seaplane carrier and a torpedo boat flotilla will also be organized, this source said.

NORGE SURVEY SHOWS BOOM

A 97 per cent increase in its sales in this territory was forecast for 1936 by J. G. Waddell, president of the General Equipment Corp., which the company played host last night in Hotel Bradford to more than 600 dealers and salesmen of Norge products.

"Norge's nation-wide survey," said Mr. Waddell, "proves that positive buying intent, as compared with last year, is 90 per cent greater for electric refrigerators, 87 per cent for washers, 88 per cent for ranges, 78 per cent for oil burners, and 95 per cent for ironers."

Norge products and new merchandising methods were introduced at the meeting by John Knapp, vice-president in charge of sales of Norge division of Borg-Warner Corp., and Jack Frolick, eastern divisional manager for Norge.

Chelsea Demands Railway Hearing

The City of Chelsea today petitioned the State Department of Public Utilities for immediate hearing on the legal rights of the city in connection with the recent agreement between the Boston Elevated and the Eastern Massachusetts for the Elevated to take over the Chelsea division of the street railway.

Additional prizes may be given these five lucky men, because their tips will be considered for the major contest awards, which include a $10 cash prize for the week's best tip, a $5 cash prize for the second and $2.50, each, for the third and fourth.

Also, they may share in the five $1 awards and the ten more pairs of guest tickets for "Exclusive Story."

PLANES 'BOMB' WORCESTER

Mineola, N. Y., Feb. 1 (AP)—Army bombing planes roared down from Concord, N. H., today and theoretically destroyed Mitchel Field, the army's great air base on Long Island, while attack planes from the field were busy strafing the airport in Worcester, Mass.

It was a beautiful Alphonse and Gaston gesture on the part of the rival airmen. Each side had its mission to perform in the cold weather and each gave the other an undefended spot to "attack."

Things will be different Monday, headquarters at Mitchel Field promised, for then the bombers will return and a score of pursuit ships will rise to intercept them.

Six bombers roared over Mitchel Field today and theoretically rained havoc, but Mitchel Field did not even see them. The "attackers" were 15,000 feet high and lost to sight.

Nine big planes had started out from Concord, but three were forced to return because of trouble with their landing gear.

SUPREME COURT TAKES UP SEC

Washington, Feb. 1 (AP)—The supreme court held its usual Saturday conference today preliminary to an opinion session Monday which may produce a ruling on constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley act.

One piece of business confronting the nine justices at the closed meeting was a decision on whether to review a challenge of the 1933 Securities Act providing federal control of securities sales.

J. Edward Jones, New York securities dealer, asked the tribunal to pass on a ruling of lower federal courts in New York that the act is valid.

Another possible topic of discussion was whether to review a second test case of the government's right to condemn land for PWA slum clearance and low cost housing projects.

IDEAL BEAUTY OF 1936

She's Taller, Thicker, No Blonde

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 1 (AP)—This year's "ideal beauty," in Hollywood, is two inches taller, several inches thicker and her traditional blond locks have changed to "midnight blue."

"There have been too many blondes for too long."

So said Leroy Prinz as he explained why he picked Miss Ann Merli (she's Marilea Merli, back home in Ft. Wayne, Ind.) as the "ideal type" out of 200 dancers. Miss Merli is five feet five, weighs 115 pounds, has a waist measurement of 26 inches, an eight-inch ankle—and "mid-night blue" hair.

"Apparently what the vast bulk of people want—those who are interested in a girl's looks, that is—is a taller type," said Prinz, "maybe it's because the race is getting bigger.

"From a technical standpoint, at any rate, it is rare that we find real beauty without stature. A girl who stands around five feet or five-two may be cute, but she isn't impressive."

Engineer Killed In Indiana Wreck

A number of members of the crew were injured as the locomotive plunged into a ravine and cars piled on top of it.

Borah Decision Due Next Week

Washington, Feb. 1 (INS)—Senator William E. Borah will delay until next week a decision on whether formally to announce himself as a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in order to enter the Ohio primaries, it was learned today.

N. E. BUSINESS GAINS CITED

Increases in the volume of electric power production, boot and shoe output, a record consumption of raw wool, and an uptrend in general construction were responsible for the increase, the Federal Reserve stated.

During December, 1935, the daily average of all contracts awarded in the construction industry amounted to $364,000, exactly three times the average for the corresponding month of 1934, the report states.

For the entire year the average number employed in Massachusetts industrial establishments increased 3.7 per cent and average weekly payrolls were up 10.7 per cent over 1934.

DRIVE PASSES 2 MILLIONS

A total of $2,050,000 for the 1936 Community Fund, for support of 100 private hospitals, health and social agencies in Boston, was chalked up today, according to a statement issued by Ripley L. Dana, general chairman.

With only nine days to go it is hoped the goal of $3,750,000 will not only be reached, but passed.

Among anonymous subscriptions received today was one of $12,500.

Over-subscriptions of quotas has marked the progress of several of the districts, but generous giving must mark the second week of the campaign to make it successful.

A high-powered plane carrying a banner reading "Give to Community Fund" flew over Boston this afternoon accompanied by a squadron of National Guard planes.

The pilots of the planes are Captain C. C. Jakway, Lieutenant I. C. Emerson, 2d, A. Shaw, Douglas MacOdrum, John H. Shobe, Ralph Eames and Al Leckshelt.

Coal Gas Fells 34 in Orphanage

Baltimore, Feb. 1 (AP)—Loosened mortar in an orphan asylum chimney was said by firemen today to have caused an escape of coal gas which overcame six children and affected 28 others.

Florence Bandholtz, a matron at the United Patriotic Orphans' Home there, also was made ill by the fumes.

The gas was not discovered until one four-year-old child collapsed in the playroom of the institution last night. Suddenly, another collapsed, and within a few minutes six of the children were unconscious.

Other children were beginning to feel the effects of the fumes when the matron summond two physicians. Firemen and an ambulance also were called, while neighbors aided in removing the children to a nearby church.

AUSTEN LAKE

THERE ARE WHIFFS OF cabbage about Wisconsin's attempt to court-martial Dr. Clarence W. Spears, the old Dartmouth fat boy and varsity football coach, on the affidavit of the team-trainer that he dynamited his players last autumn with doses of whiskey, administered in broth between the halves.

Now, Wisconsin is wishful to be quit of Dr. Spears as a pesky, talkative person, which is its own business. But the whiskey evidence sounds like trumpery, because, as a medical man, Dr. Spears is familiar with narcotics and knows that alcohol is the poorest of athletic stimulants, dulling to the senses.

Strychnine, Karo syrup and caffein in tablet form are the only components used by sports trainers to "needle" their men into sudden spasms of energy. And though the first may not be administered without medical permit and its possession, without license, is a jail offense, it is the base of the "Eagle soups," which trainers feed six-day racers, boxers, marathoners and swimmers.

It is covertly, but plentifully used in certain professional circles and, not infrequently by foreign Olympic teams.

Whiskey goes to the brain and legs, but strychnine, and to a lesser degree, caffein, goes to the heart, quickening the blood stream and flooding the system with sustained power. A tablespoon or two of Karo renews the burned out fuel cells.

As a practicing physician, Dr. Spears would know about this better than any layman, and would be least likely to handicap his men by feeding them crocks of slumber medicine just before sending them out to score a few more touchdowns.

Which is why, without further testimony, I am willing to absolve him of the charge and accuse Wisconsin of fostering false witness.

Frick's Saccharine Warning

THE RETORT COURTEOUS OF President Ford Frick of the National League, to Umpire Dolly Stark's increased salary demand, was couched in polite terms, like a pair of brass knuckles under a velvet mitten.

It was a honied preamble to a menaceful warning, remindful of Attorney Bill Callum's favorite yarn about the Texas judge who sentenced a Mexican for homicide, as follows:

"Jose Manuel Miguel Gonzales, in a few months it will be spring. The snows of winter will flee, the ice will vanish, and the air will be burthened with fragrance. In short, Jose Miguel Manuel Gonzales, the annual miracle of the year's awakening will come to pass.

"The rivulets will run their purling course to the sea. The timid desert blossoms will sprout their tender shoots. The glorious valleys of this domain will burgeon with virgin green of a maiden spring.

"From every tree top, Jose Manuel Miguel Gonzales, some wildwood songster will carol his matinee. Butterflies will flit in the sunlight, and the drowsy buzz of the bee will pursue its accustomed vocation. The gentle breezes will tease the tassels of wild grasses. And all nature will be glad.

"But you, you saffron-livered whelp of a ground toad, you won't be here to see it, because you're going to get hung two weeks from this coming Thursday."

White Nonsense in Black Business

THE SCARAMOUCHE BAND OF publicity loving militia politicians, the New York Boxing Commission, never fails to perform an addlepated antic to tide the sport pages over a dull period.

So, following the confirmed report that Joe Louis, Negro ring assassin, believes his character as challenger more profitable than that as champion, and that he will flee his match with Jimmy Braddock in September, the N. Y. commission is having a hysteric like mother hens with a weasel in the coop.

"We will see that Braddock gets a fair deal," squeals Bill Brown, as No. 1 mouthpiece.

"Jimmy has earned a break," pip-squeaks General Phelan, the outfit's Mr. Bones.

Where, hitherto, all champions have cat-walked away from any dangerous rival, the N. Y. boxing solons are taking the ring's most noted punisher by the ear, lest he run away from his chance to belt the custard filling out of the champ and snatch his crown.

Avery's Confession

CONFESSION BEING GOOD FOR the soul, Avery Brundage, U. S. Olympic papa, frankly admits that amateur conditions among the neighboring Olympic nations are not according to the label on the bottle.

In a letter to T. M. Vinson, Boston daddy of Maribel Vinson, No. 1 U. S. lady curlicue skater, Brundage has just written the following:

"Conditions (Ed. note—presumably, athletic) in many European countries are not what they should be . . . Some years ago when trouble developed in track and field, prompt action by the United States and international authorities followed by the disqualification of such prominent figures as Nurmi and Ladoumegue, soon put a stop to irregularities. Similar results can be obtained in figure skating . . . Last year I urged the U. S. Figure Skating Assoc. to put their foot down on the demands of European visitors . . ."

Some years ago Brundage, who is unquestionably sincere, rose before the A. A. U. convention and remarked, "It is our duty to keep the flag of idealism waving, to keep the escutcheon of amateur sport unburnished and sow far and wide the tenets of amateurism to make converts to the code of amateurism, until we spread the leaven of amateur sport to all enterprise of life."

Which is lots of language, Avery. But, on your own confession of European hesitancy, How ya gonna do it?

LAMB Wins 500 METER EQUALS WORLD RECORD

Davis, Switzerland, Feb. 1 (AP) — Delbert Lamb of Milwaukee scored a sensational victory in the 500 meters race, first event of the world speed skating championships today.

Lamb equalled the listed world record of 46.6 seconds set by Clas Thunberg of Finland in 1931 as he flashed home winner over a crack international field that included all four of his American Olympic teammates.

Americans took four of the first six places with Leo Freisinger of Chicago and Allan Potts of Brooklyn tied for fourth in 43.4 seconds and Bob Peterson of Milwaukee sixth in 43.7.

Second place went to Hans Engnestangen of Norway in 42.9 seconds, while another Norwegian, George Krog, was third, in 43.1 seconds.

Although Lamb's time equalled the listed world's record, it was two-tenths of a second slower than the 42.4 seconds performance Potts turned in during a recent international meet at Oslo.

Lamb drew Krog as his racing partner and one of the closest races of the series ensued. After the American had gotten away to a flying start, Krog gained the lead on the second curve but Lamb went to the front again entering the home stretch and then produced a terrific spurt to pass the finish line with feet to spare over his Norwegian rival.

Kit Klein Wins 500-Meter Title

Stockholm, Feb. 1 (AP)—Kit Klein of Buffalo today won the 500-meter race to send the United States away to a flying start in the women' world speed skating championships.

The American skater covered the distance in 53.3 seconds, to beat Minako Taki of Japan by seven-tenths of a second. Jane Bjerke of Norway was third in 54.4, while Synnoove Lie, also of Norway, and Verne Lesche of Finland tied for fourth in 55.2.

Gil Dobie Resigns from Cornell

In a letter to James Lynah, Cornell's athletic director, Dobie, head coach at Ithaca since 1920, announced his resignation "in the interests of harmony."

Dobie has been subjected to sharp criticism from alumni and other groups for several years as a result of Cornell's poor showing on the gridiron. Forecasts that sooner or later he would be ousted have been freely made during recent weeks.

Dobie said his resignation would be effective today on the assumption that Cornell could make arrangements for a successor within the near future.

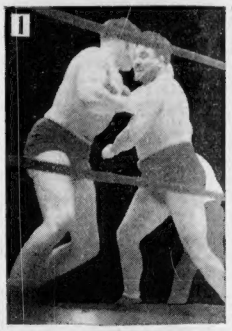

No hint was forthcoming as to who might take over the job.

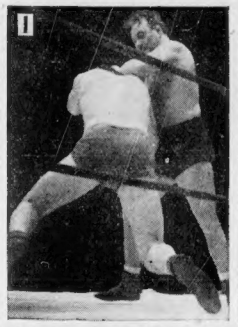

Peace

Garmisch-Fertenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 1—All was quiet along the bobsled front here today when the Stevens brothers of the U. S. A. were permitted to use their own sleds on the Olympic course.

The American sleds have sharper runners than the Germans like to see on their course. The natives protested, and so angry did the Americans become that they threatened to withdraw from the games.

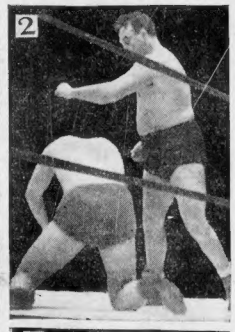

The Olympic games start next Thursday.

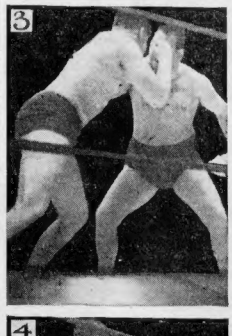

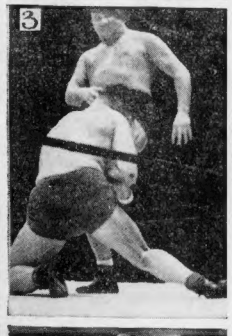

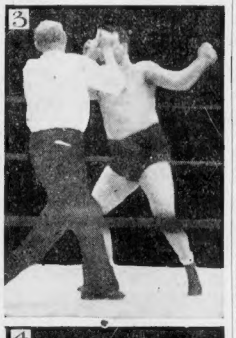

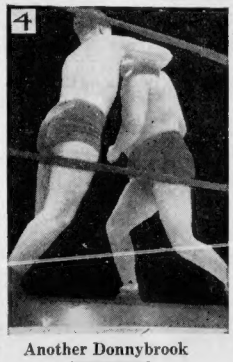

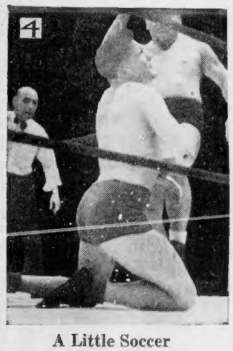

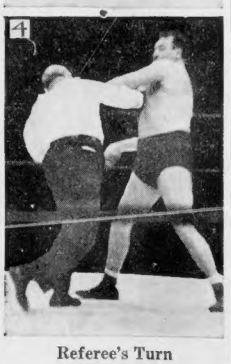

Another Donnybrook

Donnybrook had nothing on the Boston Garden as Count Casimer Polowski started a battle royal instead of tending to his wrestling business of dethroning the King of Matmen, Danno O'Mahony. Both Danno and the Count are caught by the "magic eye' in an "a la Dempsey pose," with the Count scoring the knockdown.

A Little Soccer

Not being content with the superiority of his punching the Count is showing Danno that he is a pretty good soccer player, even though he did not come from Ireland. This piece of footwork was too much for the fans so the referee gave the "all out" signal, but Casimer was never a fireman and started all over again.

Referee's Turn

The Count believed in giving the fans something to talk about so he set out for the referee, Ted Tonnemann, but found a windmill with all arms swinging. The referee was giving better than he received until the police department decided that too much was too much, and that the fans only paid one admission.

10,000 See BOUT

BOTH GREAT PUNCHERS

By Jack Conway

Dan O'Mahony, bigger and stronger than on any of his previous mat appearances here, was obliged to display all of his amazing power and strength to conquer the rugged Count Casimer Polowski before 10,000 persons at the New England Sled Dog, Inc., show at the Garden.

O'Mahony gained the first fall in 13m. 49s. when Referee Ted Tonneman disqualified Polowski for punching and kicking after repeated warnings.

The second toss was scored by the youthful Danno in 13m. 26s. by an inside body hold, lift and slam which followed a merry punching bee.

O'Mahony weighed 228 pounds, which is the most he has scaled for any of his Boston matches. Polowski was at 235 pounds.

It was evident from the start that the Count intended to cast wrestling rules to the winds and to make a fight out of it. He paraded to close quarters where he threw short, jolting punches in true Sharkey style at O'Mahony's chin.

Polowski then dropped his wallops to the body and followed this by massaging the Irishman's stomach with his knees and feet. Referee Tonneman warned Polowski against kicking and also told him not to hit with his closed fists.

Danno tried to make a wrestling match out of it, but Polowski wouldn't have it that way. He has been taking lessons in boxing from Sharkey, and he wanted to prove to O'Mahony and to the fans what an apt pupil he is.

O'Mahony fought back at the Count, but the odds were decidedly against him when Polowski would use his feet. In Ireland the colorful Danno was taught to do his fighting with his dukes and he tried to live up to his early training.

SAVOLDI WINS

Polowski kicked O'Mahony to the floor twice, and Referee Tonneman stepped in and disqualified him. As Danno was leaving the ring the Count jammed up with Tonneman, who doesn't weigh more than 135 pounds soaking wet.

The referee isn't lacking in courage, but he is a bit light for the Count. He sailed in at Polowski and grabbed the latter's legs.

Back in the ring Danno resorted to straight wrestling. He dropped Polowski with a body hold, and later applied toe holds. The Irishman applied great pressure, and the toe holds gradually wore the Count down.

Polowski then resorted to rough tactics again, but was careful to keep his hands open.

Danno belted the Count with his forearms, and, following a wild mixup in Polowski's own corner, he picked the latter up with an inside crotch hold and slammed him to the canvas with terrific force.

"Jumping" Joe Savoldi returned to Boston to upset Jake Patterson of Syracuse in 14m. 28s. with a dropkick.

Maxie Goldberg of Los Angeles won from Boris Demetroff of Woburn in 14m. 43s. with a flying tackle and body scissors.

Jack Washburn of California and Tommy Rae of Cleveland engaged in a torrid battle. Washburn pinned Rae in 8m. 24s. with a body press.

Washburn was declared a winner, but Referee Donnell reversed his decision when Washburn stepped on Rae. Under the correct rules of wrestling the first decision would stand.

Feud

Hockey scholars who have been predicting the removal of Frank Patrick as manager of the Boston Bruins at the close of the season may be only half right.

Patrick is likely to get through Monday.

Tired of haggling with Art Ross over getting players from the Cubs and other matters, Patrick will demand a showdown Monday when C. F. Adams returns from Florida.

He will get his way, or else—

Mr. Boston Fans Dislike 'Bees'

By Jack Conway

BASEBALL fans are already demanding that the Braves be re-christened. They don't like the name Boston Bees.

I have received a letter from Philip L. Leader of the National Casualty Co., in which he voices a strong protest against the new name adopted by the local National league club. He shares an opinion held by many other fans. His letter follows:

Mr. Boston

"I notice through your paper that the Boston National League Ball Club is to be known from now on as the "Bees." Who picked this name? What is so fancy and colorful about it? Can you imagine fans asking how did the Bees come out?

"If the newspaper men picked this name for the old Braves, I should think they could have picked a name more colorful than Bees. It's all like the old Braves and we are with Bob Quinn and Manager Bill McKechnie 100 per cent, but we want a peppier name than that.

"The Orioles would have been the name most suited for Bob Quinn's boys, to show the Baltimore Oriole up a little as they have always been trying to get the franchise here. Now, Mr. Boston, I have always read your column and I am taking the liberty of writing you and ask you to publish this in your column not only as my disapproval of this name, but of hundreds of other fans whom I met who have made a laughing stock of this name.

"Trusting you will persuade the gang to change this name through your column."

* * *

I HAVE met a surprisingly large number of persons who believe the name Braves should have been retained. Perhaps this is because they don't consider the name Bees an improvement over the old nickname.

"What was the matter with the name Braves?" demanded Jimmy Gately, who has been watching baseball games as man and boy for these many years.

"The name Braves was all right," remarked "Rip" Valenti of the Goodwin Club. "The name Bees will have everybody laughing before the baseball season is over."

B's and Sox Win (or loses.)

Short and snappy even though the headline writers personally may think the name Bees is a bit fooolish.

The fact that there has been so much talk about the selection of the name Bees may be proof it was good judgment to pick a daffy name. It has got the whole town talking, which may in the end be helpful to the Bees. There has been plenty of ating in some of the criticisms I have received.

BUCKLEY HERE

Buckley expressed himself as satisfied with Sharkey's physical condition, and then picked the former world champion to knock out Tony Shucco in four rounds.

"Thil went down from a fair punch to the body," said Buckley. "The referee saved the title for Thil. Before going into the ring, I knew Brouillard would get the worst of it in the event he punched Thil around too much.

COUNT ZARYNOFF

COUNT George Zarynoff will open a new drive for the wrestling heights when he opposes Tommy Rae of Clerval in a finish bout at an Alex MacLean show at the Arena on next Wednesday night.

Zarynoff has proved one of the most colorful figures to show in a local ring. He will furnish the rugged Rae with plenty of opposition.

The Massachusetts Racing Commission will take up the matter of dates at its meetings next week. Suffolk Downs plans one long summer meeting, and will not operate in the fall.

Cubs Renew Feud With Reds Tonight

'NO CONTEST' REPLAYED AT GARDEN

By Bill Grimes

Enraged over the "no contest" ruling of Art Ross, president of the Canam League, Rhode Island Reds intend to knock off the Cubs again tonight at the Boston Garden. Then Pres. Jean Dubuc will take his protest to the league directors.

After an injury had forced Rod Lorrain, a rookie, to retire in the first period in Providence, Wednesday night, Manager Albert Dubuc ordered Doggie Kuhn to dress. The game was protested because the Reds had 35 men in uniform.

President Ross upheld the protest and issued a "no contest" verdict, thereby preserving the Cubs' four games without a defeat record and dropping Providence to within two points of the third place Springfield Indians.

The Reds haven't a leg to stand on, and there is no question that the Canam League directors will at least order the game re-played, or they might be so drastic as to award the decision to the Cubs.

Regardless of the outcome of the Providence protest, the incident is a good build-up for tonight's attraction, for more than the usual number of Rhode Island fans will be on hand to prevent, if possible, the Reds from getting the works from some other angle.

PERCY JACKSON

The Cubs were traveling at a championship clip until they went to Providence, having defeated Philadelphia Ramblers in a home and home series, along with knocking off the Reds and New Haven by wide margins.

Manager Hitchman reports that his charges are all in prime shape for tonight's encounter and that he expects them to show to better advantage than they did in Providence.

Manager Albert Leduc will start off with "Toe" Blake, "Red" Conn and Rod McCully will be the front line, backed up by Andy Mulligan and Jeff Halbfleisch at the point positions and Paddy Byrne in the nets.

Alec Moitter, Jerry Shannon and Phil Besler will be the second Cub line. They will be pitted against Hago Harrington, Leo Gaudreault and Tommy Filmore. Jack Portland and Rob McCully will do the relief work for the Cubs' back wall, and Manager Leduc and Wilf Field will spell for Mulligan and Halbfleisch.

With Wednesday's game "no contest," the Reds have won six out of seven from the Cubs this season. They did not meet with a defeat at the hands of Manager Hitchman's team until two weeks ago tonight, when they took a 6 to 2 thumping at the Garden.

The Boys' Club, West End House and Y. M. H. A. all have doubleheaders scheduled on their home courts, and all the municipal gyms will be conducting a flock of Park Department league clashes.

Over at Charlestown the Boys' Club will go after its eighth victory in ten starts when they meet the strong Essex Aggies five.

As an added attraction, the Roxbury Division of the Boston Boys' Club will also play at the Jordan Gym, meeting the Boston University School of Theology.

The Boys' Club, after a shakey start, has been playing great basketball, and it looks as though Nate Hurwitz has welded another powerful quintet over at Charlestown.

Nate Hurwitz

At the Y. M. H. A. court, the Roxbury five battles the colorful House of David team. The "Y" edged these bewhiskered individuals by a single point last year and expect to win out again tonight. The game, however, should be close.

West End House is confronted with the tough task of attempting to down the Maiden City Club, which has already defeated the W. E. H. once this year and twice last year.

Coach Charlie Melnick, however, still believes he has the better team and is confident his charges will come through with a victory tonight.

BUCKLEY HOME

$20,000 Bid for Sharkey

Johnny Buckley announced upon his arrival in Boston today from France that he is in receipt of an offer of $20,000 for Jack Sharkey to battle Jack Petersen, British heavyweight champion, in a ten-round bout in London in May.

Buckley arrived in New York aboard the Europa. He was accompanied by Lou Brouillard of Worcester who recently lost a questionable decision to Marcel Thil on a foul.

Jack Sharkey

Jerry Buckley, who trained Brouillard for his bouts in France, was also in the party.

Buckley stated that boxing is drawing large gates in France, and that a tussle between Petersen and Sharkey would draw between $100,000 and $150,000.

Buckley will now give his attention to getting Sharkey ready for his ten-round bout with Tony Shucco, New England heavyweight champion, which will be staged by the Goodwin A. C. at the Garden next Friday night.

With the rich Petersen purse at stake, Sharkey will fight at top speed in an effort to stop the skillful Shucco.

Sharkey will work at Buckley's Gym today. He will lay off tomorrow, but will be back at the training grind on Monday.

Noted Around The Show

Stearns Marine Company announced that for the first time in Boston a complete line of Chris-Craft cruisers and runabouts have been assembled at the Sportsman's Show. Sportsmen will be interested in the new utility fishing model which has excited a lot of comment and praise, and is on display for the first time. It is an ideal boat for the average use of fishermen.

George L. Chaisson of Swampscott is entering his 36th year as builder of dories, punches, skiffs. He has been selected by a Harwichport club to build series of smacks. Chaisson boats have been purchased in many parts of the U. S. A., South America and Canada.

The Outboard Motor Mart offers a large assortment of motors that have been "put up for years" from fishing to racing. There is a complete display of new and second hand motors at the showrooms located at 315 Atlantic avenue.

The Canine Catering Co. of Brookline has established an unusual service delivering fresh beef meals for dogs. Owners may prescribe their dogs' diet or this company will recommend one.

A perfect fishing season this year can be had by sportsmen using Leighton's automatic splitter. This lure was given to the fishing world about a year ago and has proven to be a great fish getter. It is unique inasmuch as it eliminates baiting problems, requires no sewing on of minnows, and the right amount of spin can be had by an easy adjustment.

Judge L. W. Myers of Los Angeles has taken the world's record for sailfish, with a fish weighing 182 pounds, caught off Cape San Lucas, Mexico. Judge Myers was using an Ashaway line. The picture of this new world's record sailfish was sent to the A. T. Crandall of the Ashaway Line & Twine Company and it is being attractively enlarged for all to see at Ashaway Exhibit, section 24. Samples of the lines used in taking this world's record game fish will be on display.

Rough Water Boats Arrive

Jonesport boats, known among those who travel in rough waters, development of the Baltzer Boat Co. are not only rough water boats but fast and handsome. Jonesport boats have been famous since 1910. By actual building and rebuilding on the Bay of Fundy the present outstanding models have been developed, designed to withstand the roughest weather, and hard usage that comes from fishing in the most treacherous waters on the North Atlantic Seaboard. They are on display at the Baltzer Boat Yard, 29 Riverside ave., Medford, Mass.

OUTDOOR Lovers Find N. H. PARADISE

The Sate of New Hampshire exhibit shows that the state is a paradise for those who like such game fish as land locked salmon and trout. At the exhibit there are mountings of fish and game, an exhibit of maps disclosing the most interesting hunting and fishing spots, and alluring photos of sporting scenes taken in various parts of the state. The exhibit is under the direction of Charles Banfield and a competent staff. Information will be furnished on the full advantages of sporting and vacationing life, both winter and summer, in the Granite State.

BOSTON WELCOMES SPORTS SHOW

GREAT Outdoors EVENT COMBINES WITH BOAT EXHIBIT

Opening today, in Mechanics Building, the New England Sportsmen's and Boat Show, will this year be the most elaborate and expansive sports event of the winter season. Wild game and birds, in natural surroundings, fish of all kinds, expert guides, many of them world champions, cabins, camps, accessories motion pictures, every touch is to be there to make of this truly "outdoors within doors." And even with snow and winter all about so graphic a setting is presented that the visitor to the Sportsmen's Show actually may imagine himself in the North Woods in mid-summer.

There are animals of every description, ranging from an entire family of five moose to the smallest and tiniest of birds and insects. The huge indoor tank affords ample room for the contests in which champion guides participate, contests in log rolling, fishing, fly casting, log sawing, dance racing, canoe tilting and many other water sports.

Hunting weapons of all sorts, fishing tackle, from that used by the embryonic fisherman to that used by the most expert of professionals is to be found at the Sportsmen's Show. Several of the states will feature trout, such as are caught in their streams, and these appear in life-like mountain streams. All during the eight days of the show there will be contests between the guides in various sports events and this year a thrilling ski jump has been added to the program. In this latter stunt the jumpers slide down a glide 80 feet in length and but 13 inches in width.

The boat section is this year twice as large as that of last season, and boats of every size and variety are on display, from the miniature kayak to the 42-foot cruiser. The Sportsmen's Show will be open daily from 10 a. m. to 10:30 p. m. except that on Sunday the doors will open at 2 p. m.

MUNROE JOINS PARKER CO.

Frank Munroe, well known yachtsman of Marblehead, has joined the Thomas T. Parker Co., New England agents for outboard motors, cruisers and runabouts, and will be pleased to meet his friends at exhibit number 101 during the show. Munroe's life has been devoted to yachting from the old 18-footers down to modern Q's and 20 meters. He has also taken part in most of the offshore and Bermuda races. As chairman of the race committee of the Corinthian Yacht Club for many years, he has been a factor in building up small boat racing.

Show Noises Outrage Bull Moose

When carpenters are banging and hammering it's just too much for the nerves of this moose.

Anyhow it was too much for Buddy, the four-year-old bull moose from Nova Scotia, sojourning at present in Mechanics building, where the New England Sportsmen's show opens today.

The constant hammering of the carpenters in the hall sent Buddy berserk. He charged full blast into one corner of his pen. His antlers went through the heavy wire screening and struck an astonished plumber in the leg.

Untangling Buddy from the wire screening was a difficult job. His antlers had ramified into the holes and there he was, firmly wedged. A half hour's work with a pair of pliers finally freed him. A railing has now been constructed around his pen.

RACE DRIVER HAS EXHIBIT

The design of the new Eddy Aqua-Flow boats provides proper planing at all speeds. They ride at the same angle with one or two passengers or a full load and take the bumps out of fast runabout driving.

With the Eddy boats exhibited in the first booth, center aisle, are also Humarock outboard boats designed and built by Robert S. Boles at Marshfield.

Racing hulls made from plans by Mr. Boles are to be used in Australia. The boats will be raced with Texaco marine products.

LeGoff Buys Toppan

A. W. Toppan who established his boat business in 1890 has retired from business. Superintendent J. W. LeGoff, in his employ for over 20 years, has taken over this famous plant. Mr. LeGoff's long experience with Mr. Toppan qualifies him to carry on the Toppan reputation. There is a complete display at the Toppan Boat Co., 125 Riverside ave., Medford.

Outdoor Clothes IN DEMAND

Football parkas and Hudson Bay mackinaws were the most active items promoted by Congress Sportswear, J. F. O'Connor of the company reports.

2	York	118	Steffen	8-5	Highly regarded colt
3	Town Crier	118	Walley	4-1	Disregard only start
6	Senator D	118	Arcaro	5-2	Solid form horse
1	Bar Nothing	113	Meade	8-1	Fighting chance
5	Hexie	113	No Boy	15-1	Nothing recently
7	Mirlato	118	Kopel	15-1	Can better last
8	Flying Arab	118	Seabo	15-1	Needs racing
4	Busby	118	Stout	15-1	Improvement needed
11	Peace Mite	108	Coule	20-1	Close at times
12	Gay Moretta	118	R. Watson	20-1	Not for mine
10	Exaggeration	118	Wright	20-1	Speed in mornings
9	Kowall	118	S. Renick	20-1	Rounding to form

YORK, highly regarded Florida Derby candidate from the Greentree [illegible] an initial bow under colors, but he needs only to run back to brilliant morning trials in order to earn brackets first crack out of the box. The work tab shows that he has done everything that could be asked of a horse in the mornings. Six furlongs in 1.12 2-5 hard [illegible] for final. TOWN CRIER a rapid working son of Royal [illegible] to offer the contention. SENATOR D is the solid [illegible] form.

FOURTH—SAILOR BEWARE, POLISH BEAU, LAUGHING SUN

FOURTH RACE—$1000, handicap, three-year-olds and up, six furlongs:

	Sailor Beware	105	Wagner	4-1	May be right one
	Polish Beau	117	Longden	4-1	The main danger
	Laughing Sun	110	Males	5-2	The weight off chance
6	Lostfield	118	Arcaro	8-5	Can better last two
5	Cherry Time	101	Wall	12-1	Rounding to form
1	Beaver Dam	102	G. Watson	15-1	Best races in mud
4	Hey-o Home	103	Merritt	20-1	Early foot

SAILOR BEWARE dead shot in a seven furlong dash last trip, [illegible] to improve sufficiently to lead this field under the imaginary wire. The Greentree colorbearer took a long and lonesome lead on [illegible] and other fleet thoroughbreds in his recent endeavor and the [illegible] affair should suit him nicely. POLISH BEAU rapidly [illegible] Polymelian colt, showed excellent recent form and [illegible] the horse to drub. LAUGHING SUN, second to Old Story, takes [illegible] pounds off that recent endeavor.

FIFTH—DON CREOLE, JAMBOREE, ROSSELLI

6	Don Creole	115	Arcaro	7-5	Best bet on card
3	Jamboree	108	Steffen	4-1	Fast working contender
9	Rosselli	110	Wall	4-1	Chance on last
8	Clancy		Males	8-1	Dropping down
2	Roshaven		Wright	10-1	May need a race
5	Mount Blar	110	Litzenberger	15-1	High speed in graduation
5	Lancstone	109	M. Garner	15-1	Improvement likely
7	Big Dinner	102	Meade	15-1	Improvement needed
4	Sandy Boot	110	G. Watson	20-1	Tough spot

DON CREOLE recent form is all that can be desired. The Odessa color-bearer simply cake-walked to a smart band of three-year-olds last Friday. In front of that he showed an excellent performance to [illegible] over the one-mile route. Contention, if any, will likely be furnished by JAMBOREE. The latter is from the Greentree barn and will be making his first start in some time, but the work tab suggests a [illegible] performance first crack out of the box. He concluded training with an easy eight panels in 1.40 2-5. ROSSELLI, on general form is clearly entitled to the next best rating.

SIXTH—JACK SNIPE, LOLLIES, EDRI

3	Jack Snipe	112	Seabo	3-1	Best effort needed
7	Lollies	100	Kastner	5-1	Last very good
7	Edri	105	Jackson	6-1	Rates good chance
11	Thumbs Down	115	Arcaro	6-2	Fighting chance
12	Caresta	107	G. Watson	10-1	Close at times
1	Birbiris A.	105	Litzenberger	10-1	Works well enough
5	Sweet Susan	112	Maschek	15-1	Close at times
9	Jerry H.	117	Gilbert	15-1	Stranger
8	Frieze	103	Wall	15-1	Fast workouts
10	Shelter B.	99	Merritt	12-1	Improvement needed
6	Star Cry	107	J. Renick	12-1	In smart hands

a—Mrs. F. A. Bonsal and Mrs. W. Strawbridge entry

JACK SNIPE is benefited by a short layoff, coming up razor sharp and strongly recommended by the clocking fraternity. The Widener [illegible] tapered off training with an easy eight furlongs in 1.41 3-5.

SEVENTH—DEAN SWIFT, TOP HIGH, SPARKDALE

SEVENTH RACE—$800, claiming, 4-year-olds and up, 1⅛ miles:

1	Dean Swift	109	Jackson	4-1	The class; dropping down
5	Top High	108	Fallon	4-1	The main danger
10	Sparkdale	112	Stout	4-1	Dangerous on last
6	First Pigeon	102	Kastner	5-1	May be good thing
7	Gallant Miss	113	R. Watson	6-1	Some excellent races
9	Muslet	110	Stafford	8-1	Likes the route
4	Supreme Court	109	L. Hanford	10-1	Needed last
2	Big Shot	114	Seabo	12-1	Improvement likely
1	Marlosa	114	Wall	15-1	Last race helped
3	Judge Judy	115	Greer	20-1	Hard to guess
12	Kapena	113	Phillips	20-1	Nothing recently
8	Colorist	113	Coule	20-1	Route too far

2 HOCKEY TIES ON GARDEN ICE

In the first two games of the Greater Boston Inter-Scholastic League at the Boston Garden, the final bell sounded with the teams tied, Melrose and Newton fighting it out to a 1 to 1 tie, and then Medford and Belmont batling to a 4 to 4 tie.

After a scoreless first period, Harrington of Newton took a nice pass from Brown and lifted past Birdsall in the Melrose nets for the first score. Gil Priestley tied it up for Melrose three minutes later, Davison, substitute center, setting up the play. The remainder of the game play was even with neither team able to break its opponents' defense.

Medford got the jump on Belmont in the first period when Kenty, star defenseman, sooped down the ice to beat Fitzgerald. Hartwell, on a nice combination play with Wight, evened the score shortly afterward. In the second and [illegible] part of the third period Medford dominated the play, piling up a two-goal lead but with a late rush the plucky Belmont team scored two goals to deadlock the game.

DISCOVERY Makes '36 Debut On Coast Today

By Bob Ahearn

Discovery, brilliant five-year-old son of Display, has been allotted top impost of 130 pounds in the San Carlos $5000 added Handicap, the same weight that Secretary Webb Everett has assigned the Vanderbilt colorbearer in the Santa Anita $100,000 added handicap the latter part of this month.

Discovery has been working over the Arcadia strip in record breaking time the past few weeks, and his performance today will be watched with interest.

Seven other handicap stars will compete against Discovery, including his stablemate Scotch Bun, and Impeach, Black Gift, Beefsteak, Aerial Cross, Azucar and Head Play.

* * *

Sheldon Fairbanks, onetime head of the Boston Garden, is in our midst for a few days. Fairbanks has come up from Florida to take in the Sportsmen's and Boat Show at Mechanics Building. The exhibition is under the direction of the Campbell-Fairbanks Exposition, Inc.

Fairbanks has been racing his stable at Hialeah Park and has enjoyed success with his string, which is headed by Kings Pleasure, Sweet Mollie and Colonel Ed.

* * *

Postmaster General Jim Farley is a successful horse player. He has beaten the ponies in two visits to Hialeah Park. He usually wagers deuces, sometimes plunges with a five-spot. The other day he finished out in front despite the figures of George Preston Marshall, the Boston Redskin major domo and Washington laundry man.

YAWKEY REFUSES TO PREDICT FLAG

O'Brien, Raymond, Sandler to Start In Hollis 600

By Murray Kramer

Slowly and with great care the B. A. A. officials are rounding out a mighty fine program for their 47th annual meet at the Boston Garden next Saturday night.

In the 600-yard run, for example, Milton Sandler was handily in the Prout games but it would not be surprising to see the National A. A. U. 600-yard champ finish third next week.

Mr. Sandler will have two gentlemen to defeat who did not start at the Prout meet. These two individuals are Eddie O'Brien of Syracuse, and Doug Raymond of Boston University.

O'Brien is the best quarter miler in the country and has run the 600 in 1 14. If he duplicates this time next week, he will beat Sandler.

RUNS TONIGHT

Raymond is another dangerous rival for Sandler. Doug finished ahead of Sandler in the Prout Games last year when Fuzzy broke the track 600-yard mark, and his time in that race was 1 15 1.

Since then the Boston University track ace has even bettered this time and should be at his best when the B. A. A. meet rolls around.

Ray McLaughlin, Bowdoin star who won the 45 yard high hurdles at the Prout Games, will have a tough time at the B. A. A. Meet. His stiffest opposition will come from Sam Allen, intercollegiate 120 yard high hurdles champion; Phil Good and Johnny Donovan.

Harold Manning, of Wichita, Kansas, winner of the two mile at the Prout Games, will have to beat Ray Sears of Buller, who ran the fastest two miles ever timed for the American runner last winter.

Winning Year Seen If Ostermueller Is 1934 Self

New York, Feb. 1.—Tom Yawkey is not claiming any pennant for his Red Sox—as yet. Three years in the game have taught him the dangers of overconfidence, and the Boston Midas refuses to put himself "on the spot" as a forecaster.

However, he has great hopes for his club. It will, he believes, be in the thick of the running all the way if Fritz Ostermueller returns to 1934 form.

But let the young Sox owner tell it himself:

"Last year Ostermueller won only 7 and lost 8, and injuries prevented his pitching in more than 22 games. However, his earned run average was well under—to be exact—3.91.

"We believe that with Herb Pennock coaching him, and a break in luck as regards injuries, which have Fritz Ostermueller hampered Fritz ever since he joined the Red Sox, he will win 17 or 18 games.

"If our dope on Ostermueller is all wrong, we will be sunk again. With Fritz doing no better than he did in 1935, we would not have enough pitching to oust the Tigers, and make those Yankees tremble.

"Pennock will have plenty to do. While Ostermueller will be his principal patient, Herb will have three others for daily class work—Jack Wilson, from whom Joe Cronin expects a great deal, and a couple of other youngsters who will be picked from half a dozen at Sarasota."

Here the interview was interrupted. Yawkey had put in a call for Cronin in San Francisco.

CRONIN BOSS

What's a mere long distance call of 3000 miles to a man who thinks nothing of paying $400,000 in one bunch for a few ball players?

"Hello, Joe," caroled Thomas. "Nothing doing on that Chapman business. Ed Barrow says they must have Cramer, or nothing. So I told him to let it go at nothing. What's that? You're down to 175 pounds? Well, that's great."

"Cronin finished the 1935 season weighing 184 pounds," Yawkey resumed. "He was too heavy. He is working hard out in San Francisco, and will come to Sarasota scaling 175. Then he will take off five more and open the season at 170—at his old post at short.

"How about McNair at short, Cronin at third and Werber in right field? Well, there has been some such conversation. But I doubt if this shift will be made. Anyhow, Joe is the boss in so far as placing the players is concerned.

"Joe played under tremendous handicaps last season. His wrist was weak, he suffered a bad stone bruise on a heel, and should have been on the bench a good part of the campaign.

"But he persisted in fighting on. He has got over all his troubles and should show us the Cronin of 1933 all over again."

"Are those former Mackmen giving you any trouble?" the interviewer asked.

TO GO SOUTH

"No," Yawkey replied.

Then he caught himself with a chuckle.

"Not yet. We signed Jimmy Foxx first. Then Eddie went down to Philadelphia the other day and got Cramer's signature.

"I have heard no complaints from Marcum and McNair. I suppose all those men came to us with the feeling that we should make up to them for the lean years they spent in Philadelphia."

Yawkey plans to spend several weeks with the Red Sox at their training base in Sarasota, Fla., which was discovered in a baseball sense by the late John J. McGraw.

"Our first squad will report on March 1, and the second division will start work a week later," Yawkey said.

"Judging from the requests to be listed with the first squad, there is plenty of enthusiasm on our ball club.

"Yes, after a drought since 1918 it looks as if Boston might stage a pennant comeback this year. But don't make me say rash things. I am not hollering pennant, I know exactly what one sore arm would do to us."

Collins and Quinn Leave For Gotham Writers' Dinner

By Joe Cashman

Eddie Collins and Phil Troy of the Red Sox and Bob Quinn and Oscar Horton of the Bees leave town today to attend the annual dinner and show of the New York Baseball Writers' Association tomorrow evening. Tom Yawkey, owner, of the Sox and Bill McKechnie, manager of the Bees, will also attend.

The scribes, it is reported, will humorously dramatize the Sox wholesale purchases from the Athletics and the Boston Nationals rechristening. The local baseball bosses will laugh as heartily as the next guy and mean it. They can take it.

After the affair, Yawkey will hop down to his Carolina hunting lodge for some turkey shooting, while Collins will return to the Fens unless he has to go to Durham, N. C., to attend to the transfer of the Sox Piedmont League franchise from Charlotte to Rocky Mount.

Quinn will remain in New York for the National League schedule meeting, Wednesday, when he'll introduce Oscar Horton, an Athol leather tycoon and new treasurer of the Bees, to the senior circuit magnates.

Horton has long been a dyed-in-wool fan, an annual visitor to the Spring camps of the Boston clubs and he was a stockholder in the old Braves, but he never took an active part in the direction of the club until Quinn took over the reins.

Chances of any deals being made at this meeting of the baseball czars are slim, according to both Collins and Quinn.

"I'm sure the spirit of the club will be much better this year and I'm ready to do my part to put the Bees back in the race," read a note from the popular Texan.

Bill McKechnie will come to Boston when Quinn returns on Wednesday next. The "Prexy" plans to ask Rabbit Maranville to come to town at the same time so that the three can sit down together and decide on the midget's status.

Eddie Collins made the presentation, told his erstwhile secretary he was sorry to lose him and wished him the best of luck in his new berth.

Manager Joe Cronin has wired the Fenway office that he plans to spend the next week or ten days in Hollywood.

Johnny Orlando, Red Sox clubhouse boy who gets seasick going across the ferry to his home in East Boston, must make the trip to Florida by boat.

He's been assigned to sail down with Eddie Collins' auto and drive it from Jacksonville to Sarasota. But E. Trowbridge isn't taking any chances. He's sending Coach Tommy Daly on the same sea jaunt.

A strange prank of fate delivered the signed contracts of Tony (call me "Chick") Cuccinello, Bobby Reis and Al Lopez, three of the four players obtained from Brooklyn, at Bees' headquarters within the same hour. Cuccinello lives down on Long Island, Reis is wintering in St. Paul and Lopez is loafing in Tampa, Fla.

N. E. TANK TITLE Race at Lynn Y

The N. E. A. A. A. U. men's 500-yard freestyle championship swim features the tank meet at the Lynn Y. M. C. A. today.

G-Man to Guard Secret Of Garrett Mystery

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Los Angeles, Feb. 1—Well, I have heard everything. Pardon my levity but cross my heart and hope to die this is the truth. David O. Selznick has engaged Joseph E. P. Dunn, former head G-man of the Los Angeles and Southern California territory, to guard the secret of a mystery drama which Oliver H. P. Garrett is writing for him.

David claims that several ideas which she had for pictures were "snitched" by other studios and the Garrett play, which is intended for Ronald Colman, is so unusual he wants to have a scoop.

Harriet Hilliard's cup of joy should be overflowing, for she has just been handed a new five-year contract by RKO and all because she is so good in "Follow the Fleet." But her bridegroom, Ozzie Nelson, is busy in New York and they have to be separated many months while she is making pictures in Hollywood. However, the offer made her by Radio is far too dazzling to be ignored. She will be starred in Rupert Hughes' "Static," and that is something considering the short time she has been in pictures.

To save a little boy's faith in fairy tales John Barrymore dined in the gold makeup and costume of Mercutio at the home of Reginald Denny. Denny's four-year-old son visited John on the "Romeo and Juliet" set and the little boy, seeing Barrymore, cried: "Oh, that is Prince Charming from my book." And he wouldn't leave until the Prince went with him. So John, who has charmed so many women in his day, completely captivated the small boy by having dinner with him in costume and telling him fairy stories until the child fell asleep.

The "Dodsworth" play which brings Walter Huston back to Hollywood, also brings Juliet Crosby Hornblow to our town. Speculations are again rife as to whether the Hornblows will finally settle their matrimonial differences with a divorce. They have been separated for several years, Mrs. Hornblow living in New York and Arthur maintaining his residence in Hollywood. He recently presented Myrna Loy with a diamond ring, and rumors have been printed again and again of their intention to wed when he is free.

The family and friends of Lewis Stone have been genuinely concerned about his health. He will finish his role in "Old Town Girl" and make one more picture, "The Unguarded Hour" with Loretta Young, and then take a long vacation in the South Seas. Stone, who is a pioneer film actor, believes that the sea voyage on his yacht, the Serena, will restore his health.

Mitropoulos' Conducting Hailed at Symphony

By RUTH MARSTERS

The concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday afternoon at which Dimitri Mitropoulos appeared as guest conductor moved the audience to the highest enthusiasm.

Tonight's performance of the same program will mark the end of the celebrated Athenian conductor's two weeks' engagement with the orchestra.

The program, which consists of Mahler's First Symphony in D major, Schmitt's "Tragedy of Salome" for orchestra after a poem by Robert d'Humieres, culminated by Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in G minor for organ, arranged for orchestra by Mr. Mitropoulos.

The latter was magnificently performed. In his transcription of the work, Mr. Mitropoulos has adhered to the original content, using orchestral means to enrich the texture, accentuate the color, and increase the sonority.

Of Mr. Mitropoulos' conducting, it is difficult to speak briefly.

The clarity of thought which illuminae the reading of each score, he poetic intensity, his insight into the composer's meaning, these are salient characteristics of his interpretations.

The individuality of Mr. Mitropoulos' technique of conducting has perhaps been sufficiently commented upon. It is difficult, however, to refrain from adding more as to its marvelous expressiveness, its dynamic force.

The vibrant response of the orchestra to the compelling force of the guest conductor's personality resulted in a superb performance of each work.

NEW YORK Acclaims Wallace, SKATING KING

By Walter Kiley

Winner of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Silver Skates Derby at Franklin Field, the Big Green sophomore from San Francisco will be treated royally both before and after his competition in the Champion of Champions Silver Skates race at Madison Square Garden on Monday night.

Madison Square Garden has been sold out for one full week. A colorful show is to be put on with performers of prominence in the stage, radio and speed and fancy skating arena lined up.

Opposed to him will be Silver Skates winners from New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Toronto and Detroit, the finest speedsters of the land and sure-fire members of future Olympic teams.

On the small indoor track, some 12 laps to the mile, he will be far from at home. Yet he entertains high hopes of turning in a creditable performance.

And as local representative, that is all that is asked of him.

HOLLAND GILLETTE Veteran Star Returns To Boston

By GEORGE HOLLAND

I suppose that the forthcoming week's most important theatrical item must be listed as the premiere Monday night at the Colonial of the new Ina Claire-Osgood Perkins vehicle, "End of Summer," by S. N. Behrman.

This is a new play, and with its distinguished stars, its highly literate author and the producing aegis of the Theater Guild it rates as entitled a place with the really major happenings of the season.

Nevertheless, hardy followers of the drama will have to consider the fact that a week later the Claire-Perkins premiere, another offering of great moment, George Holland comes to the Shubert Theater in the form of a revival of John Golden's "Three Wise Fools." This famous comedy takes on authority because it will have as star the veteran William Gillette who, after an absence of several years, returns to the stage with an excellent company.

The Gillette Company ranks as an all-star aggregation. James Kirkwood, Charles Coburn and Brandon Tynan, each of whom has seen his name in lights too often to be thrilled by the display, are supporting Mr. Gillette in "Three Wise Fools." Elizabeth Love, June Sheryl, John Blair, Isabel Irving, Sydney Booth, William H. Post, Jr., Addison Pitt, and Scott Moore are other members of the cast.

"Three Wise Fools" will play two weeks at the Shubert.

* * *

More interesting locally, perhaps, than either of these two announcements is the news that Mary Young will continue her prodigious tenure of the Copley boards, Miss Young will play FO leading female role in a revival of "The Ghost Train," a mystery play which enjoyed a long run at the same theater several years ago with E. E. Clive as its sponsor.

"The Ghost Train," will open Wednesday night, and among the players appearing with Miss Young will be Helen Carew, Eric Kalkhurst, Mildred Dana, Sandra Greene, John Tayloe, Bradley Martin, Francis Hart and Arthur Holland.

This play will be the fifth presented by John Craig II. Miss Young's able son. The forerunners were "Post Road," "Kind Lady," "Katydid" and "Ceiling Zero."

McLaglen Stars as Thug

By MARION FRENCH

"Professional Soldier" and "Exclusive Story" are the two exceptionally fine films currently seen on the screens of Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters.

Victor McLaglen and Freddie Bartholomew share acting honors in "Professional Soldier," which is based on Damon Runyon's amusing tale of an American gangster's attempt to kidnap the king of a tiny Balkan country.

McLaglen is seen as the rough and ready machine-gunner who finds himself making friends with the little king, played by Freddie. They make a great team, with the little boy having the time of his life, emulating the tough slang of the American boy and learning about baseball and dice games at the same time.

"Professional Soldier" is light, exciting, and packed with laughs. McLaglen is great in the gangster role. He and the quaint and charming Freddie, who played the youthful David in "David Copperfield" with such success, have some extremely funny scenes together. Hearing the carefully brought up king use slang expressions and watching the oddly assorted pair at play together, truly is a delight. We certainly hope to see this team in more films . . . it would be a shame to break up so grand a set! Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen supply the film's love interest. Miss Stuart is looking especially lovely these days we must admit.

* * *

"Exclusive Story" is from the pen of the New York reporter who is now cooling his heels behind prison bars for his refusal to reveal sources of racket information used in his stories. Mooney's brainchild makes a fascinating basis for a picture. It is melodrama of a most exciting nature, dealing with New York's policy racket.

Franchot Tone has the role of a young crusading attorney in "Exclusive Story." He gives his usual skilful performance here in the part of the rescuer of the beautiful Madge Evans, cast as the daughter of a "policy victim." There's plenty of suspenseful action in the unravelling of the picture's plot, until a sensational climax shows Tone doing away with the "numbers" gang.

Harold Lloyd Laughable As Milkman

By ANN AMES

Harold Lloyd and Ricardo Cortez are thrilling the Metropolitan Theater's patrons this week. Lloyd is seen in his latest comedy, "The Milky Way" on the screen and the suave Mr. Cortez is making one of his rare personal appearances in a clever sketch, as part of the stage show.

"The Milky Way" has the hilarious and nonsensical plot typical of the Lloyd successes. Here the be-spectacled comedian appears as a tender-hearted milkman with a great fondness for his horse, Agnes. It is because of his habit of treating the lady to sugar that he accidentally becomes a middle-weight champion.

The bullies along his route tease him so much about his sweets that he learns to "duck" in a fight. When a champion fighter starts something with him, the milkman knocks him out by a fluke. This incident starts Lloyd in the fight business, with a manager named "Honest Gabby" Sloan.

The action of this film is speedy plentifully exciting and there are many laugh provoking situations in its plot. One of the funniest sequences is the prize-fight scene showing Lloyd battling William Gargan, the dizzy champ. The sight of these two boys knocking each other out unsuccessfully is almost too much fun for an audience to bear.

Helen Mack, as Lloyd's sister in the picture and Dorothy Wilson as his sweetheart are both good to look at and give very snappy performances. Vera Teasdale is amusing in the role of Honest Gabby's girl friend, while Gabby is played by Adolphe Menjou in admirable style. William Gargan is immense as the "punchy" champ and the rest of the supporting cast turn in good work in minor roles.

* * *

"The Milky Way" is one of Lloyd's happiest vehicles. It gives him plenty of chances to display his fast-moving and slightly nutty style of comedy.

'Ghost Goes West' Is Hilarious Film

By HARRIS MORGAN

For the protection of native directors, the government should immediately set a high tariff on the importation of foreign screen megaphoners if the work that Rene Clair, celebrated French director, has accomplished in "The Ghost Goes West," one of the most amusing films ever made, may be taken as an example.

"The Ghost Goes West" took occupance yesterday of the screen of Keith's Memorial Theater. It marks Mr. Clair's debut as a director of an English-speaking picture. It marks, moreover, this young man as one of the inspired talents in the world of the cinema.

It makes (with another moreover) a young actor named Robert Donat, who hails from New Haven. It is the actor's best vehicle, and it is certainly the merriest picture of the season.

In "The Ghost Goes West" a hilarious story is begun in Scotland with the airplaning around a Scottish castle of a ghost. The ghost is the great lover of all theatrical ghosts. It becomes an internationally famous ghost, this Ghost of Glourie Castle, and when an American millionaire (Eugene Pallette) purchases the castle, and imports castle and ghost to America, its comical career really begins.

The Dice Game Trial

Adventurer's Story Proves It Pays to Be Honest in Navy

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Now here's a story that shows it pays to be honest—even in a dice game.

FLOYD GIBBONS

This dice game was held in the navy. I don't know much about navy dice games. The last one I saw was being played with franc notes, in back of a barn over in northern France. That was an army crap game with the honor of seven different regiments at stake. When the German observers saw it they began strengthening their line. They must have thought the whole A. E. F was massing for an attack.

But this was a navy dice game and it happened before the war. It took place in the summer of 1911 about two and a half minutes after the paymaster had paid off the last man. The boys gathered in the forward compartment, some gob broke out a pair of dice, and the game was on.

One of the interested parties in that dice game was JACK THOMPSON, Camden, N. J. I think I ought to mention him because he is our Distinguished Adventurer for the day and the lad who tells the story. Jack was in there fighting a six-sided battle and hoping the sides containing the five and deuce would come out on top.

Now, of course, in an adventure story you ought to have the element of danger. That was represented by the officers of the U. S. S. Paulding, on which the game was being held. A sharp eye was kept on both hatches leading down to the compartment, but as the game went on everybody got more interested in the dancing dice than they were in who ran the fleet.

And just when the game was getting hot the captain—Old Man Gloom, Jack calls him—eased himself down one of the hatches and caught about 30 fine young seafarin' men breaking that part of the Rules and Regulations for the Government of the United States Navy which prohibits gambling.

"Of course," says Jack, "there was a mad scramble for the other hatch, and most of the shooters made a getaway. But the Old Man collared ten of us, together with the dice and sixty dollars that was lying on the deck. And right away we were hustled up before the mast to stand trial!"

Up before the mast, Jack was the first to be tried. "Thompson," the captain said, holding out the sixty dollars and the pair of dice, "is this your property?"

"No, sir," said Jack. They couldn't catch him that way. Claiming the dice and that money might land him right smack in "84," the West Coast navy hoose-gow. The next eight men to be tried took a tip from Jack and gave the same answer. They didn't own that money, and they didn't own the bones. That was all there was to it. And then the captain came to the last man in line.

The last man, the 10th to be tried, was a guy by the name of Smoky Smith, machinist's mate, first class. For the 10th time the captain held out the incriminating bones and the incriminating dough and asked the same old question.

And then something went wrong with the routine in the good old U. S. Navy.

"Yes, sir," said Smoky Smith. "That's my property."

"Well," says Jack, "what do you think of that. I said to myself, that guy is too honest to live, but he has certainly got guts. Then what does the captain do but hand the works over to Smoky, and if Smoky doesn't take them—dice and all. I thought, 'Here's where Smoky ends his career in the navy and finishes his hitch in the brig. Then the captain started to give us all a proper bawling out."

Well, sir, before the captain had more than half finished up with the bawling out, Jack Thompson could see himself dangling from the yard-arm. Then finally the captain wound up his oratory in a fine, sea-going, sulphurous peroration.

"And now," he said, "I am going to pronounce sentence on you men."

"My old heart just about stood still," says Jack. "And when Old Man Gloom did pronounce sentence on us I almost dropped through the deck. The sentence was: A ten-dollar deck court for each and every man. Nine of us got off plenty light. But Smoky Smith got off easier than easy, the way I figured it out. Because when you take that ten-dollar fine away from the sixty he got from the captain he still had fifty left."

Well, sir, honesty paid that time—somewhere in the neighborhood of five hundred per cent. That's what Jack thought. But then curious facts began coming to light. A couple of the boys who had taken part in that game just happened to remember that Smoky hadn't even touched the dice—hadn't taken any part in the game at all. He'd been merely standing by, watching the game, when the captain came soft-shoeing down the stairs.

You may not be able to make fifty bucks that easily, but you can make ten. Send in the true story of that adventure you've had. Meanwhile—shoot the works! There's a great yarn Monday by a Lynn man.

Floyd Gibbons, himself an adventurer of note, is never too busy to listen to the other fellow's experience. He wants to hear the story of the biggest thrill in YOUR life, and wants to pay you ten dollars for it. Floyd says anyone can draw down one of those ten dollar checks, or win the hundred that he gives for the best TRUE adventure story of the month. Literary ability has nothing to do with it. Send him YOUR story. Win a prize and become a member of the Adventurers' Club.

NEW ENGLAND

Aircraft INDUSTRY Growing

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Expansion plans announced by United Aircraft officials at Hartford, Connecticut, call for the raising of five to six millions.

The engine and propeller business of the company has increased so substantially that it is felt a new propeller plant must be constructed. This would leave present facilities free for the exclusive use of the motor division. At the same time a subsidiary, Sikorsky Aircraft, is badly in need of additional space if quantity production of transport amphibians and large flying boats is undertaken.

* * *

The unusual prospects facing the construction industry has been commented on here quite often of late. The speculative and investment possibilities of building supply issues is bringing increasing inquiries as to what particular units are favored. In this connection it may be of interest to some readers to know that the Bankers Economic Service of New York has published a special survey with chart data. Individual companies are briefly analyzed and segregated into groups.

* * *

Comment: From the review noted above we take the following stocks for semi-investment: Sherwin-Williams, National Lead and International Cement . . . For semi-speculative issues, likely to be faster moving than the first group; American Radiator, Flintkote, Glidden and Rubberoid . . . For speculative and probably fastest moves; Timken-Detroit, Yale & Towne, General Asphalt, Archer - Daniels-Midland, Otis Elevator, Holland Furnace and Pittsburgh Plate Glass . . . Which is a sufficiently diversified list to satisfy most any investor or trader appetite.

* * *

The stock market literally crushed its way to new highs as the week closed. The feature, of course, was the excellent performance of industrials as a whole and steels as a group. As we wrote earlier in the week the prospect is now for much higher prices all along the line. Only a bad turn in the news should stop the bull crowd. The stocks listed as appealing in the event the market behaved as it did are those favored. We will consider them added to our hypothetical trading account.

* * *

Notebook: There are two stocks that seem worthy of particular mention . . . Consolidated Gas and U. S. Steel . . . Tape action of both is fine, technical chart considerations very encouraging and fundamental business trends are looked upon as favorable . . . Columbia Gas among the utilities seems to be gathering quite a following for itself . . . Today the American Institute of Finance devotes two pages of its bulletin to an analysis of the stock . . . And concludes it is a purchase around 15.

STOCK MARKET

Prices IRREGULAR At Close

New York, Feb. 1—The stock market started off with a bullish rush today, but later encountered profit taking in a number of the recent spectacular gainers.

Many new highs for the past several years were recorded before realizing developed. Advances of fractions to a point or so were scattered over the list at the somewhat irregular close.

The little inflation sentiment that may have been present in the preceding session seemed to have cooled perceptibly.

Overnight buying orders were in abundance at the opening. The ticked tape dropped a few minutes behind floor transactions during the first hour and near the finish.

Cotton was unable to get ahead and grains were relatively narrow. The French franc gave ground to the dollar and other foreign exchanges were mixed. Bonds were rather steady, although U. S. Government securities continued hesitant.

Rail shares were about unchanged and the utilities and aircrafts pointed lower. The steels and motors slipped a fraction in either direction.

Current Factors

Moderate gains were registered by du Pont, Johns-Manville, Deere, Westinghouse, Collins & Aikman, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Standard Oil of New Jersey and a number of others. Douglas yielded about 2 points.

Radio preferred "B" and common were heavy following publication of the company's recapitulation of the company's recapitalization plans. Electric Power & Light, Consolidated Gas, American Can, Chrysler and Columbia Gas sagged.

The higher margin requirements, as decreed by the Federal Reserve Board, went into effect today, but just what influence these had on the stock list, as a whole, seemed a bit obscure.

As throughout the greater part of last year, brokers pointed out that the principal buying in equities is still on a cash basis, although speculative positions have grown somewhat lately.

Inflation and new taxes were the principal topics of discussion in the boardrooms, but traders also continued to study general business developments.

While new financing during the past year was largely of a refunding character, some investment houses were expecting a shift to more constructive borrowing during 1936.

Offerings in January amounted to almost three times the total for the 1935 month, with industrial issues showing a much larger upturn.

SCREEN MIXUPS
BY ART MOGER

Millions!

Visit the popular Lynn Paramount Theater today where Manager J. J. Dempsey offers "Millions in the Air" and "The Bride Comes Home" with all of the above "Screen Mixups" characters. Of course, you know who they are, or don't you? Answer the daily question pertaining to the career of one of these players. All clues may be found at the Lynn Paramount Theater.

Unscramble the batch of mixed up letters near each cartoon likeness. When properly arranged they will spell the first and last names of the above drawn Hollywood players.

Mail your entire week's solutions to: The Screen Mixups Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston Mass. A complete set of six cartoons (Monday through Saturday, inclusive) will win you an award, as offered by the Boston Evening American.

Neatness, accuracy, promptness, and originality in presentation are deciding factors in sharing in the many weekly cash and theater ticket awards.

Murray Defends Supreme Court and Constitution

By WILLIAM H. MURRAY
Former Governor of Oklahoma

(From an address delivered before the Association for Economy and Tax Equality at Enid, Oklahoma.)

Now as to the Supreme Court. There are only four times in the history of that court, for nearly 150 years, a just reason or excuse, for criticizing that court, largely due to the fact that in the beginning for more than 60 years it was presided over by two men, John Marshall and Roger B. Taney, the two immortals.

When the court in the Dred Scott case stepped aside to rule upon things not before the court. This caused Lincoln and the leaders of the Republican party to criticize the court and justly so.

The second was the decision of 1871, caused by the court's being packed with politicians and overturning the decisions of the court for more than 80 years.

THIRD CRITICISM

The third criticism and the most reprehensible of all, was when the electoral commission was created, providing for five members of the House, five members of the Senate and five members of the Supreme Court, to decide the Tilden-Hayes contest, resulting in a vote of seven to eight; seven for Tilden and eight for Hayes, cast on party lines; the judges falling into partisanship, just like Congress. But that had its foundation in the holdover of the stacked court, above referred to.

In that case the court should have said:

"All political power belongs to Congress and not to the court, and the jurisdiction of our court is fixed by Article Three and the 11th amendment of the Constitution, and Congress cannot delegate power to this court, and we decline, therefore, to act."

JUST CRITICISM

The last just criticism was along. Had the court done this, it would have shined like a mountain, but when it proved its members to be purely partisan, much of the prestige of almost a century was lost, and thus began doubts in many minds of the stalwart, fair and just-mindedness of the court.

In the '90's, when the Supreme Court by a five-to-four vote upheld the income tax law and the next morning one of the judges (Shires) changed his opinion, resulting in declaring such law by a five-to-four vote unconstitutional, again overturning five decisions declaring such tax constitutional.

THREE BRANCHES CITED

The fact that the Constitution created three separate, independent, co-ordinated branches of government; the fact that the court was given power to construe and declare the law, it became inherently the authority of the court to wipe away the redundancy claimed for law, carried with it the power to declare such redundancy not in harmony with the Constitution, as null and void—just as inherent as the power of a court to fine for contempt; just as inherent as the citizen cannot sue the government without its consent, although not written in the Constitution, or the law; just as inherent as the government is not subject to "limitation," "Laches" or "Estoppel," although not written in the Constitution, or the law; just as fundamental as the "Tenant cannot deny the landlord title"; otherwise it would be unsafe to let a man go into your building—these things and many others which must be understood by the Constitutional Lawyer, before he can understand how to interpret Constitutional Law; because they are fundamental; they are axiomatic; they are too elemental for a sensible man to think of writing into law, or the Constitution.

They must be taken as granted and will be by every man who knows.

And the man who "knows" and "knows that he knows" is the only man fit to follow.

There is ample power within the Constitution, as is, for any emergency or problem of government, political or economic, if known to those who try to govern; but not for a dictatorship of any kind, be it Bureaucratic, or State Socialism, or the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

The End.

Create Jobs and Wages, Buy American

AMERICA is becoming awakened to the value to domestic prosperity and re-employment of a nation-wide decision to "BUY AMERICAN."

We have already seen how Secretary Hull's visionary inter-nationalism has tended to break down the protective tariff systems by means of "reciprocal" treaties.

But our people have another defense—at least a partial defense.

It lies in THEIR OWN PATRIOTIC DETERMINATION invariably to GIVE PREFERENCE TO PRODUCTS MADE AT HOME.

By buying American products, our people immediately GIVE EMPLOYMENT TO AMERICAN WORKINGMEN.

If this is desirable as an economic policy in normal times, it is DOUBLY NEEDED at this juncture when, according to estimates, some 10,000,000 Americans are still without jobs.

In this subnormal situation, it is FOLLY, IF NOT ACTUAL DISLOYALTY, to buy competitive foreign products.

The explanation is simple.

By buying foreign merchandise, and thus refusing to employ American man-hours, we offset any selfish economy by creating the need for maintaining displaced American workers in idleness at the expense of the taxpayer.

Accordingly, when the cost of the dole is added to the expense of foreign competitive merchandise, it is apparent that buying foreign competitive imports is a FOOLHARDY, EXPENSIVE and EXTRAVAGANT PROCEDURE.

IN the circumstances, the recent "BUY AMERICAN" recommendation of the Massachusetts Department of Labor and Industries should be followed by the other forty-seven States.

Not wishing to repeat the foolish mistake of the Federal PWA in permitting competitive German steel to be ordered instead of the American product, the Massachusetts department urges legislation REQUIRING governmental branches to GIVE PREFERENCE TO AMERICAN-MADE GOODS.

"William Randolph Hearst," the report said, "has been the foremost advocate of 'Buy American' of recent years, devoting pages of his news and editorial columns in his newspapers throughout the country to provide facts concerning conditions under which merchandise is produced in foreign countries, the foreign countries' policy and program of buying at home, and the effect 'dumping' has had upon American labor."

Interested readers, who desire to enlist in the campaign, should sign the "Made in America" pledge card, reading as follows:

"I hereby pledge myself to buy, so far as is practicable, only products made or grown in America, by American labor, of American materials—and thereby protect my job, give work to my fellow Americans, and maintain the American standard of wages."

Acting with the co-operation between employers and employes, the Made in America Club, 420 Lexington avenue, New York, is prepared to distribute these pledge cards widely.

An aroused popular opinion in favor of Buying American will supplement existing tariffs, and prove more effective against competition from low living standard countries in spite of the free trade policies of the present government.

Workers Should Benefit

The cotton industry will pass along to consumers the fifty million dollars mill owners retrieved when the Supreme Court smashed the AAA. This is a praiseworthy policy. The public will approve it.

The cotton industry's policy, if adopted by every manufacturer, will benefit the worker. That makes it wise. HE should benefit.

Boston Honors a Leader

Two million dollars has been added to the university assets.

Listen to Ambition or Be Sorry

UNFORTUNATE, doomed to failure, is the young man who does not listen attentively to the whispering of Ambition, and ACT upon her advice. Ambition is the condensation of courage and will power. It is to man what steel reinforcement is to concrete, to success what gasoline is to an automobile or airplane.

With ambition everything is possible, without it, nothing worthwhile is possible. It possesses the force that starts a man on the upward path and keeps him going. It may drive too fast or too far, as it drove Napoleon first to Moscow, then to St. Helena—but who would not rather be Napoleon with Moscow and St. Helena included, and now lie in the glorious tomb under the golden dome of the Invalides in Paris, than some nobody, withering away in obscurity.

The old Cardinal, disappointed, embittered, charged his young friend to put away ambition, warning him "by that sin angels fell." One foolish, misguided angel, Lucifer, the Light Bearer, did fall and took others with him, but his trouble was not ambition, it was diabolic jealousy of Heaven's Ruling Power.

Regardless of Lucifer and his troubles, the young man who puts away ambition also puts away SUCCESS.

One says, "ambition has no rest," but who wants rest, in a life so short, that it ends almost before you know it has begun.

Gray, placid, in his university, writing pleasant poems, wrote "the path of glory leads but to the grave." What of it? Every path leads to the grave. We are ALL going to the grave together. Why not go in a way befitting A MAN, achieving something on the way, not slinking from cradle to grave, aimlessly, timidly, like some alley cat furtively passing from one back yard to another.

If a young man says with a self-satisfied smirk, "I am not ambitious," he means, says in other words, "I am not COURAGEOUS." Some call ambition "the mind's immodesty," and one called it "the glorious frailty of the noble mind." Certainly, as Montaigne says: "Ambition is not a vice of little people."

Who wants to live and die a "little" person? Who wants to trudge forever in the rut, with the herd, going from bedroom to office, and back to the bedroom eternally, until Time says, "you've gone back and forth long enough," and buries you.

Madame Necker, wife of the able Swiss financier and statesman who served France so well, and mother of the famous Madame de Stael, saw at the French court great ability and vile intrigue rise to high places and said, "remarkable places are like the summits of rocks; eagles and reptiles only can get there."

There is a difference: the eagle FLIES to the highest peak, the reptile crawls in his slimy way as high as he can go and not really high. True men of great ambition and real worth occupy the highest places, not the slimy, crawling kind.

Those who have a low opinion of ambition are usually those that fail, or succeed only moderately. Vanity or conceit may represent ambition unrealized, as the crawling caterpillar represents the future, many-colored butterfly.

Wolfe, a courageous young English officer who climbed the heights, took Quebec for England, and lost his life, offended his superior officer by his "conceit." The superior said he was tempted to dismiss Wolfe for his "bragging." Strutting up and down, waving his sword, Wolfe told how he would capture the supposedly impregnable Quebec fortress if given the opportunity. That was vanity, but ambition was back of it. They gave him the opportunity, and HE TOOK QUEBEC.

In a child's boasting and dreaming of future greatness, you see the foreshadowing of ambition, always to be guided, directed, cherished, never discouraged.

The sad thing in modern life is that it gives so little opportunity for individual achievement, but TRUE AMBITION will find a way to the top.

The old trite saying "Where there is a will there is a way," is solemn truth. WILL POWER, guided by noble aspirations, creates AMBITION. Where the will upholds ambition, there is a way.

The Book of Success Is at Hand, but Unless Guided by Ambition, We Can Never Open It.

Did you know that it isn't necessary to be an American citizen to obtain Federal relief in America—meaning food, board and clothes for as long as your emergency continues?

Did you know that there are over five million unnaturalized foreigners in America, and that a large part of them are on the dole—and that there's no Federal law to remove them therefrom?

Did you know that there are country communities in America where 75 per-cent of those on relief are aliens?

These dependents are not visitors caught in sudden emergency. Were that so, they would be entitled to sympathy and help. But they have lived here for years—many for a lifetime.

They have done business here, raised families, accumulated money and sent money back to the Old Country. Yet they still regard themselves as loyal citizens of their mother nations—and to them America is simply A NIT-WIT SANTA CLAUS.

I am not a government expert. As an authority on sociology or economy, I'm a good waffle cook. And tickled pink to have all political discussion to the Wise Boys'

ARE WE THE GOATS?

Moreover, I have a lively appreciation of the difficulties facing those who are administering relief, and sincere sympathy for them. Yet I can't escape the conclusion that somebody is being played for a sucker . . . and I've a horrid suspicion, partner, that it's US.

This country is going into debt at the rate of TEN MILLION DOLLARS PER DAY. That ten million dollars is coming out of your and my pockets. Which is jake with any decent citizen, as long as it is being spent for those who are rightly entitled to it.

But when it comes to bankrupting our own lives and mortgaging our children's futures to support a lot of people who aren't interested enough in this country to throw their share into the kitty, I, for one, get a good fit of pouts.

Yes, I know all that talk about brotherly love. I've made a lot of it myself, and meant it. But suppose the other fellow isn't a brother and doesn't want to be? Is the Regular Family still supposed to eat the burnt crusts as he can have his three squares? I protest, it doesn't make sense.

Concerning which, Congressman Leslie C. Arends of Illinois has compiled a bill which latterly comes to me like the first robin in spring. Congressman Arends' method of handling these embarrassing guests is simple—he'd send 'em back to their own countries.

But suppose they haven't any homes there? That is obviously the bad luck of the country to which they belong. And why in heck should we make it ours? They have no homes here either.

OUR CHANCES CURTAILED

Neither have several millions regularly qualified Americans. And the chance of these qualified Americans ever acquiring homes will continue to be mighty slim as long as we go on adding a burden which obviously belongs to some other land.

Is anyone batty enough to imagine that any foreign country would House, clothe and feed millions of Americans while its own citizens were on starvation rations?

Congressman Arends would also force registration of these foreigners. At present hundreds trickle in illegally over our borders and it is impossible to tell how many aliens there are in America, where they live or what they do—a fact which increases the G-man's responsibility plenty—since these same aliens, though they contribute nothing else, are plenty generous with gun play.

It is estimated that this nation would be saved approximately TWO HUNDRED MILLION PER YEAR if dependent foreigners were returned to their home land.

And how we could use that cash, boys and girls!

Let's Dismiss Prejudices

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

This letter has come to me from a man in Des Moines:

"I am a naturalized American. I am vitally interested in the political questions of the day, the question of the Constitution and what everyone seems to be calling, without explaining very clearly, the fundamentals of the political philosophy of the Democratic and Republican parties.

"You see, my knowledge of United States history, like that of my native-born associates, has been gathered only from primary school textbooks. Won't you go into it for our benefit, since I presume to say that there is nothing in the current news more human or interesting than the present debate?"

The order from Iowa is quite a large one. It will require more than one column to fill it.

It must be admitted that we are, as a people, in the class of the man of Des Moines—poorly informed on our own history and on political and economic subjects.

BRIEF ACCOUNTS GIVEN

In the little red schoolhouse we get a sketchy outline from Fiske, Bancroft and others of the one thousand and one events which began when a Genoese convinced himself that the world was round and which ended with the year that the particular textbook was published.

It is safe to say that there is not one in a thousand of our public school graduates who cannot give a satisfactory account of what happened at Saratoga in 1777 and at Gettysburg in 1863. On the other hand, it is more than likely that not one in that thousand can describe adequately the contest between Jackson and the Bank of the United States.

Getting closer to our own times, how many of us, born since 1890, are able to draw the parallel between the silver situation today and as it was 40 years ago?

Again, how many of the few who know more than vaguely the history of Byronism, know as well that McKinley was no enemy of silver, and largely in a spirit of opportunism took up the standard for "sound money."

FALSE PROMISES THRIVE

So long as this ignorance exists, so long will the United States be a fertile field for the agitator and his "isms." As Grover Cleveland said, the masses do not know and won't take the trouble to learn. Instead they will give ear to the one who talks the loudest and the longest and who holds out the roisiest promises.

It is from such sources we hear today that the American system is antiquated, that it needs overhauling or junking.

You would think, and, sad to say, too many Americans do think, that 150 years is a long time, whereas these theories and practices of collectivism are the last word in streamline government vintage of 1936.

How long is 147 years, or how old is the American Constitutional system? Just about the lifespan of the third Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court and that of the present Chief Justice.

Roger B. Taney, of Maryland, successor to John Marshall, was born in 1777, twelve years before the Constitution was adopted, and he died as Chief Justice in 1864. Charles Evans Hughes was born in 1862, a matter of two years before the death of the man in whose place he now sits.

So, when we begin to look closely into the American Government, let us dismiss any prejudices we may have formed on the point of antiquity, remembering rather that within its limits has grown up a civilization which far surpasses anything developed under any other system at any other time.

Houses Tell Stories of Owners

By Winifred Black

She looks just exactly like her house, the woman I met at the winter resort the other day. She is little, prim, tightlipped, cold-eyed and sort of fussy, and she always acts as if she were afraid she might be poisoned if she ate something someone else offered her.

She invited me to tea in her house the other day. She didn't have to give me the number of the house. I knew it the minute I got in the street where it stood. A cold, precise, formal kind of house it was.

The hall rug didn't know what a speck of honest dust was, and if you had moved one of the chairs in the living room an inch the poor little woman who thinks she lives there would have fallen in a dead faint.

And another house I know—it's kind of shabby, not so very new and there's always a piece of something somewhere where it doesn't belong, and you're likely to stumble over the baby's pram cart in the living room. But somehow, I like that house. It's alive.

The house itself looks as if it had stood through a thousand storms and rather liked the feeling of them.

Inside the rooms are large and comfortable. And if there's one particle of sun in the sky, it will find its way into that house somehow.

The man that built this house must have been a sailor of sorts, home from the foreign sea. And his wife was surely a comfortable, cosy, home-loving, home-making woman such as is the back-bone of the world.

The houses we live in—what stories they do tell of us and of our secret hearts!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Feb. 1.—I peeked in on a production of Romeo and Juliet some weeks ago. Romeo suggested Elbert Hubbard in the 90's, a Hubbard with a leg of mutton sleeves of a cruel blue. A performance strictly palestric. He gyred and gimbaled with the grace of a gazelle.

Now and then he would land with great bounds, like a Russian dancer leaping for buttercups, in front of the balcony in picturesque poses. And Juliet's pipe-White voice seemed almost to reveal a coating of frost. The only natural acting was by a Mercutio.

One almost felt like scratching "Attaboy" on the back of a visiting card and dispatching it to his dressing room. All of which is a prelude to a conviction there has never been a natural love scene on stage or screen. Nearest I ever saw was between Melvyn Douglas and Helen Gahagan.

But they were in love at the time. Indeed, married only a few hours before the curtain rose. Even so, with grease paint, spotlights, etc., it did not seem 100 per cent real. Making love is an emotion of seclusion. Any revealment beclouds like a pinch of bluing in clear water.

I am watching with interest an experiment in farming by proxy of the photographer Ewing Galloway. He has acquired a sizeable farm in his native Kentucky and, with a man to manage on the scene, he expects to spend two months a year, two weeks at a time, developing it.

A friend in Tulsa sends a silver mounted hoodoo chaser for a key chain. He solemnly avers it is the left hind foot from a rabbit killed in a grave yard on Friday, December 13, 1935, at midnight by a one-eyed darkey with the miseries. I am bedevilled by very little superstition but somehow today when a taxi sent me hirpling to the curb in hop skip I thought in my escape of that rabbit's foot.

There are not many adults without at least one unshakable superstition. Mine is raising an umbrella indoors. My Scotch grandmother, who often seemed fey, had one of her presentiments a rainy morning. And when I opened an umbrella in the kitchen to set off for school her terror increased. She made me remain home. At noon we received word of Uncle George's unexpected passing.

Few successful novelists have so much genuine fun at parties as Sinclair Lewis. He, a Nobel prize winner, is a complete reversal of the customary and expected decorum. No burlesque is too broad nor caper too idiotic.

I frequently wonder if born New Yorkers feel the tug for Central Park that I do. There's scarcely a day in town that I do not walk or motor there. To visit the park is as much of a day's routine as eating. It is best when wimpled in furls of snow and a gold-drained moon shimmers a brooding, hovering, vanishing loveliness.

The wind shrieks a joyous little whistle under the foot bridges, like a sudden unsuitable exhilaration. A crackle overhead reveals a squirrel flashing from bough to bough. Somewhere the cry of a darting bird. Mounts silhouetted on the bridle path suggest giant rocking horses in gentle sway. Here and there the chuckle of a waterfall, as though indulging a soft mocking laugh for the dangerous whirlpool that is Broadway. So close, yet seemingly so remote!
